Air Power: Key to Modern Strategy

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT:

IT is said that the beginning of wisdom is attention to realities. What is the outstanding reality facing you and Mr. Churchill at your sixth conference? It is that events have outpaced your assumptions at your previous conferences. Why is that? There is only one answer: Airpower. In spite of all we are doing, we have failed rapidly enough to project our strategic thinking along the bomber line.

Why not absorb the lesson and give airpower its full due in your war councils? Admittedly the bomber has become the primary offensive weapon of modern warfare. Admittedly our airmen have been the only service to establish major contact with our Nazi enemy. Yet airpower remains in an inferior command position. It deserves promotion on performance. It demands promotion because its subsidiary status has so evidently retarded our strategical thinking. An all-air chief of staff ranking equally with King and Marshall would bring your military plans in balance. He would help you keep those plans ahead of events.

ASK Mr. Churchill. In 1917 he was quoted as saying:

"Ultimately, and the sooner the better, the air service should be one unified, permanent branch of imperial defense, composed exclusively of men who will not think of themselves as soldiers, sailors, and individuals, but as airmen and servants of an arm which possibly at no distant date may be the dominating arm of war."

Churchill's vision was realized before war came. However much Britain may have slept between wars, at least she was not entirely asleep in the air. Churchill's view that an air force should be independent of Army and Navy took shape in the valiant RAF. So much they owed to so few at Dunkirk and during the Battle of Britain. Ask Mr. Churchill what he meant by that statement. Surely his real meaning was that the British had given airpower a free hand.

With this free hand, without interference from Army or Navy, the RAF put six guns into their Spitfires. The six guns saved the day at Dunkirk and later over Britain. With them the Spitfires completely outclassed a Luftwaffe which was governed by soldiers and kept by soldiers in leading strings. It was the first field day for airpower.

Where would Britain be today if she had gone to war with a divided airforce, i. e., with a Navy airforce, with an Army airforce, with a Marine airforce? A satellite of Nazi Germany.

WE were the Nation who slept between wars, not Britain. We kept air power cribbed, cabined and confined by soldiers and sailors. Inevitably they thought in terms of the old warfare and kept on thinking in terms of the old warfare even after we were landed in conflict. Typical of the air thinking of the two services on war's eve was Admiral Leahy's "The battleship is the best of modern weapons" and Admiral King's "Army aviation should end at the shoreline." We have picked just two comments. We pick them because Leahy and King are your supreme strategical counselors with Marshall.

The country has a right to know whether this is the type of strategic thinking which is still going on at your elbow. Soon we may have vanquished Germany. Then it will be Japan's turn. Evidently the planning against Japan is still Navy-dominated. But, if bombers are killing Germany, bigger and better bombers can and will kill Japan. Logically, therefore, bigger and better bombers must be the key to the arch of our plans for the conquest of Japan.

IN this country we had our men of vision equally with Britain. One was your old chief, Mr. President, Josephus Daniels. Back in 1917, a generation ago, when airpower was cutting its first teeth, Mr. Daniels, then in Mr. Knox's place as Secretary of the Navy, said:

"Many people thought that Tennyson was employing poetic license when he spoke of the 'Airy navies grappling in the central blue.' We have lived to see that he was a prophet of modern power in warfare. No nation can confidently look for victory because it is mistress of the sea or master of the land. Both may be made impotent by the nation which commands the air."

In future, to be sure, there must be one service supported by the three pillars of air, land, and sea. Such an innovation as Mr. Daniels recommended, indeed, is a decade overdue. But to carry out this plan to the full would take time. Let us begin with the first step. This is to establish without delay an all-air staff with a chief at its head rating equally with Navy and Army.

Assurances that war contractors need not fear that they will be left "holding the bag" with severe losses on partially completed contracts by a sudden end of the war were provided yesterday by the War Department.

Maj. Gen. C. L. Corbin, director of procurement, Office of the Quartermaster General, disclosed that the present policy of the War Department is to provide "prompt reimbursement to the contractor for any loss which he might face as a result of contract cancellations."

Corbin made the policy statement at a meeting of the War Production Board Woolen and Worsted Manufacturers' Industry Advisory Committee, where he explained "that no cancellation of existing contracts is contemplated and that present contracts will be continued unless unforeseen circumstances—such as a sudden termination of hostilities—make a different course advisable."

At the meeting Corbin explained a previous announcement that Army procurement of blankets and wool fabrics would be substantially reduced in 1944, thus freeing wool for essential civilian and lend-lease use and virtually making unnecessary the rationing of clothing to civilians.

The meeting occurred Wednesday and was closed to the press, but the War Production Board made available a summary of the proceedings, including General Corbin's policy statement, through the Office of War Information.

Informed quarters pointed out that fears of a possible sudden demobilization have prompted some manufacturers to think of starting to get out of the war business to avoid being caught short with a backlog of partially finished goods and no orders on the books for civilian goods.

These fears, it was pointed out, have generated tremendous pressures to permit the resumption of

'Because of Its Character'

Part in Churchill-Roosevelt Talk Not Suggested—Moscow

London (Friday), Aug. 13.—The Moscow radio said early today that "the Soviet government did not receive an invitation to be present" at the forthcoming meeting of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill in Canada "because of the nature of the conference."

The Moscow radio broadcast, recorded here by the Soviet monitor, said Russian participation in the conference "was not and is not envisaged."

Moscow's announcement brought speculation that Russia was not invited to the conference because Britain and the United States might be concerned with pressing the war against Japan. Since Russia is not at war with Japan the Soviet government presumably would not take part in such a conference.

President Roosevelt disclosed in Washington that Russian representatives would not attend the conference, but he said that did not mean he would not be awfully glad to have them present.

The Moscow radio quoted this statement, which the official agency Tass said it was "authorized" to make:

"The Tass news agency denies that Stalin or any representative of the Soviet government will participate at the forthcoming meeting between President Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill.

"The British Reuters news agency, basing itself on the American radio station Columbia, reporting on the meeting now taking place in Quebec of Roosevelt and Churchill suggested that leaders of the Soviet Government should be present. (The meeting actually has not occurred yet so far as is known.)

"On the other hand the British newspapers, Daily Telegraph, Morning Post and Daily Express, and some others published a report that the Soviet military attache will be present at the Anglo-American talk as an observer.

"Tass is authorized to state that these reports are based on a misunderstanding. The Soviet government did not receive an invitation to be present at the meeting, and because of the character of the conference the participation of any one representative of the Enemy Sets Up 500 Antiaircraft Guns to Guard Evacuation

By Relman Morin
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Aug. 12.—The bulk of German troops in Sicily are now in flight across the Messina Strait to the Italian mainland under a merciless attack by Allied airmen braving a barrage from more than 500 antiaircraft guns mounted on the escape beaches, front reports said tonight.

Leaving desperate rearguards and road demolition squads behind to slow the American and British armies converging on Messina, the Germans have a good chance to avert another Tunisian disaster because of the narrowness of the strait. It is only two miles wide at one point.

The right wing of the Nazi line was ensnarled by the second American pincer movement initiated from the sea in three days; the left was slowly giving way under British pressure, and the Germans' central anchor at Randazzo had been brought under light artillery fire.

A dispatch from Noland Norgaard, Associated Press staff correspondent attached to the British Eighth Army, said the German evacuation of the Messina bridgehead was in full swing, with at least 80 vessels ferrying men and equipment eastward across Messina Strait night and day.

Axis antiaircraft guns were declared massed in record strength in an effort to protect the vessels from Allied planes. The dispatch said the German high command, wishing to keep down the loss of equipment during the movement, had decreed that "the passport to Italy is a gun."

"Disengagement Movement"

The retreat was described in a Berlin broadcast by Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, Nazi military commentator, as a "systematic new disengagement movement by German and Italian troops."

"What matters," Ludwig said, "is to prevent the enemy from extending his operations to objectives on the mainland."

Striving for the knockout, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's officers steadily threw in fresh units to replace battle-weary troops at the front in the fight against numerically weaker German detachments which could obtain no such respite.

Tank-supported infantrymen of the United States Seventh Army, aided by American warships and planes, landed from assault boats 3 or 4 miles behind the German

London (Friday), Aug. 13.—Russian shock troops stormed through the suburbs of Kharkov yesterday to within five miles of the Ukraine metropolis from the northeast, while other columns in the south smashed into the strongpoint of Chuguev where the Germans were in full retreat, a Moscow communique said today.

The Russian offensive against Kharkov—now in its eighth day—appeared on the verge of success as Nazi infantry retreated in disorder, leaving war materials and prisoners in Russian hands.

Capture of Chuguev indicated that Kharkov may soon fall to the Russians, for although it is 22 miles from the city its capture in last winter's Russian offensive preceded the occupation of Kharkov. The Germans reoccupied the city and the surrounding area a month later.

The Russian midnight communique, recorded by the Soviet monitor, said the Germans were making a bitter last stand defense in the Kharkov area and were even using battalions freshly arrived from Germany. Technical troops and engineering detachments wrenched from their special tasks were given rifles and sent into the front lines.

Finish Fight Seen

Although the escape corridor from Kharkov was only 37 miles wide, the communique indicated that the Germans were preparing a fight to the finish, rather than make a strategic retreat. But the fight was costly. Crack Russian guards divisions in two days' fighting killed about 3000 Germans, took 450 prisoners and destroyed 36 tanks in the Kharkov fighting.

The Germans had reported earlier that a large Russian shock force was organizing in the Chuguev area.

The Russian fighting rim, three-quarters of the way around Kharkov, moved in to take a total of more than 20 towns and villages and Red army troops captured 100 trucks and 17 German tanks in good working order.

Showers Forecast

Farmers of nearby Maryland and Virginia Counties will continue to face drought conditions over the weekend and temperatures will hover in the region of 90, it was indicated last night with reports from both States that crop yields were being lowered daily. The official forecast for today was "Continued warm with scattered showers" in the morning.

Virginia's Department of Agriculture, division of statistics, at Richmond, gave out the most disheartening report pertaining to one specific crop. It said the State has planted "a record large acreage in soybeans for oil" and that the heat and dryness has "wrought declines in their condition." Yield per acre "estimate prospects" were still up to average, but are definitely "somewhat lower than last year."

The Virginia report also said the drought is extending through the middle of the State from the Potomac to the North Carolina line, where many counties are suffering a "servere reaction."

The drought south of the Potomac has lowered late potato

Algiers, Aug. 12 (AP).—U. S. Senator Ralph O. Brewster (Republican) of Main, asserted today that the American North African Economic Board is contracting for large amounts of local wheat at prices 50 to 60 cents a bushel higher than in the United States.

The Senator, a member of the Truman Committee, who is here with four other United States Senators on a tour, leveled a general criticism of "lack of coordination and unification" against American civil agencies functioning in North Africa, including the lend-lease administration, the Board of Economic Warfare and the Office of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation.

Milan Bombed By RAF; Yanks Raid Nazi Oil

'Fortresses' Pierce Heavy Defenses and 25 Are Shot Down

By James M. Long
Associated Press Staff Writer

London (Friday), Aug. 13.—A strong force of RAF bombers was reported to have pounded Milan heavily early today after American Flying Fortresses attacked objectives in three German Ruhr and Rhineland cities by daylight yesterday.

A Reuters dispatch from Bern said observers on the Italian frontier could see an exceptionally heavy raid in the direction of Milan just as they witnessed a similar attack on Milan, Turin and Genoa early last Sunday morning.

The northern Italian cities, where many German troops are believed to be concentrated, have been the most vocal in demanding that Italy quit the war.

(The Swiss telegraphic agency in a dispatch from the Italian border town of Chiasso reported Milan was subjected to another intensive bombing that began at midnight and lasted until 1 a. m. Explosions could be heard and the glow of fires could be seen in Chiasso, 25 miles away.)

U. S. Planes Raid Reich

The American planes in yesterday's attack on synthetic oil plants at Gelsenkirchen and Wesselring and industrial targets at Bonn, crashed through heavy German defenses to reach their targets. They unloaded tons of bombs whose weight was believed comparable to the largest amount ever dropped on London, even under cover of darkness.

German planes raided England last night for the second night, dropping bombs in scattered points of East Anglia.

Yesterday's American raid ended a lay-off since late last month.

Twenty-five of the four-engined craft were lost, but it was announced that they shot down at

AFL Vetoes CIO Joint Political Action Proposed

Chicago, Aug. 12 (AP).—Shunning entanglements with the CIO, the AFL elected today to pursue its traditional, independent political way, and appealed to members of Congress to reconsider the Smith-Connally strike law under pain of labor's strenuous opposition at the polls.

Evidence that public opinion was swinging against the act was reported by the federation's executive council.

Army Denies Fats Are Being Wasted At Camp Ritchie

A formal Army denial that raw fat is wasted at Camp Ritchie, Md., was issued by the War Department last night.

The denial was directed at yesterday's Post story quoting a man who identified himself as a cook at the camp that from "300 to 500 pounds of fat trimmed from meat" was burned nightly in the incinerator.

An investigation showed, the War Department said, "that in compliance with Army orders that all waste materials be salvaged wherever possible, all cooked spent frying fats, bones, cooked and uncooked, raw fat uncooked, and trap grease accumulated in interceptors of sewer lines at Camp Ritchie are saved for the manufacture of explosives."

"It is estimated that enough waste fats are salvaged in Army camps within the continental United States to make 1,500,000 pounds of dynamite each month," the Army said, "as well as leaving a residue of rendered grease from which five million pounds of soap stock may be made."

The Army also said the Camp Ritchie incinerator had not been in operation since last April.

The Big OCD Show

Model Village in Griffith Park To Be Blown to Bits Tonight

Ear-splitting bombings, answering antiaircraft fire, destruction of a model village, crumbling buildings, shouts of rescuers—these and more will feature tonight's dramatic climax at Griffith Park to the two-week drive to recruit 22,000 additional volunteer defense workers.

Actually a gigantic stage for tonight's OCD recruitment pageant, the village will be blown to bits, affording not only a workout for District civilian defense crews but stimulus for the current drive for volunteers.

If Clark Griffith visited his ball yard yesterday he must have suffered a moment of apprehension. Five to six inches of sand were being spread over the far outfield—to prevent the bombs from blasting huge craters in the turf; the bleachers were "mined"; heavy trucks hauled materials across the precious infield.

Officials, however, promised the damage would be negligible, but the show "terrific."

Cardboard, wood and steel "prop" houses; a school, a bank, an apartment house and a 34 by 60 foot Capitol Building started rising at the stadium at 8 a. m. Huge searchlight towers, a battery of antiaircraft guns and all the makings of the city's "realest" mock air raid were assembled.

"Unbelievably Complete"

Skill in Plotting Ploesti Raid Astounds British Observer

By the Associated Press

London (Friday), Aug. 13.—The lone British observer to accompany the raid by American Liberators on the Ploesti oil fields in Rumania August 1 marveled today at the "unbelievably complete" planning that went into the attack.

"Our advance information was so detailed we even knew the difference between the uniforms of Rumanian town and country police," declared Squadron Leader George C. Barwell in an interview. "The dummy plant we practiced on before the raid made spotting the real target simple."

Although the American bombers flew at extremely low level up the Danube River for two and three-quarter hours before reaching their target, the surprise seemed complete, Barwell said.

He said the Liberators were chosen for the low level attack because they could withstand "unbelievable punishment."

He praised an unidentified colonel commanding one group, saying that although his ship received a direct hit on the way to the target he led his formation on in to do its bombing and eventually crashed.

During the Ploesti attack Barwell said that "covers of some of the big oil tanks flew up into the air like giant clay pigeons."

After dropping their loads the Liberators turned for home at such a low height that several of them returned with their bellies ripped by fence posts, he declared.

Gable Took 'Shots' In Leading Fort Riddled by Enemy

London, Aug. 12 (AP).—Capt. Clarke Gable, the former movie star, rode in the leading Flying Fortress of the U. S. Eighth Air Force group which attacked Gelsenkirchen today and returned to base unhurt although enemy anti-aircraft fire cut 15 holes in his ship.

Gable stood during the entire six-hour flight between the pilot, Maj. Theodore R. Milton of Washington, D. C., and the copilot, Lieut. John B. Carraway of Raleigh, N. C., shooting movies for a gunnery training film.

Major Milton, whose wife Betty Bailey Milton resides at 5 Pinehurst Circle, Chevy Chase, D. C., is the son of the late Col. Alexander M. Milton, USA and Mrs. Teresa McKenna Milton of 3133 Connecticut ave. nw., Washington, D. C. He attended Georgetown Prepartory School and was graduated from West Point in 1940.

Nazis Hastily Taking Troops Out of Sicily

lines on Cape Orlando just before dawn Wednesday. They beat off three Nazi counterattacks and established a bridgehead just as they did earlier this week to outflank the San Agata-Cesaro defense line, it was disclosed today.

A fierce battle still is raging.

A dispatch by Harold V. Boyle, Associated Press correspondent with the American Seventh Army, said the "leap-frogging" task force seized a number of prisoners and the main body of the Americans, striking frontally from the west, had closed the 7-mile gap and pocketed the garrison of the cape.

This most spectacular of the land operations developed as American vanguards were believed to have pushed to within 3 miles of Randazzo, and the British, mopping up two more villages on the eastern slope of Mount Etna, moved up to within 10 miles of the Axis supply port of Taormina.

Enemy transports, railways, roads and bridges were attacked by Allied aerial squadrons both in Sicily and southern Italy yesterday and United States Flying Fortresses in strong force bombed the Royal Arms Factory, gas works, workshops, rolling mills, railway trains and other targets at Terni, 50 miles north of Rome.

Damage Severe

A headquarters statement said the damage at Terni was severe and, although Focke-Wulfs, Messerschmitts and Macchis arose to challenge the Fortress formation, "their attacks were not pressed home energetically." A Rome radio broadcast said there were 565 casualties.

Bombers, fighter-bombers and fighters sank four enemy vessels, knocked out 21 enemy trucks, battered barracks, fired a Milazzo ammunition dump and attacked railways and bridges of both Sicily and southern Italy, taking in Rosarno and Randazzo, Angitola and Catanzaro.

One of the raiders failed to return. Testifying to the general shyness of aerial opposition, gunners did not claim the destruction of a single enemy plane yesterday.

The new American amphibious operation developed as the troops of Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., consolidated their gains in the area of San Marco d'Alunzio, between San Agata and Cape Orlando. It placed American troops 40 miles west of Messina, near the mouth of the Nazo River.

Fought Off Counterattacks

Plowing through the surf, the infantrymen met a German bayonet charge and beat it back. The beach was the scene of furious, swirling fighting as the Germans counterattacked in successive waves, but the Amercans cut their way through and advanced toward higher ground.

The German high command insisted in its Berlin broadcast communique that the landing forces were driven off. The Nazi radio subsequently transmitted a declaration that the venture was "useless." It said a regiment of infantry and a tank formation were employed.

Churchill Sees Niagara

By the Associated Press

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Aug. 12.—Cigar-smoking Winston Churchill, visited this hydro-electric power center and pre-war mecca of honeymooners briefly today before departing for an unannounced destination.

The English war leader motored into the United States from Niagara Falls, Ontario, after spending an hour and a half viewing the Niagara River, Queen Victoria Park and the rapids of the Niagara River. He boarded his special six-car train shortly after arriving in this country.

Smiling Mary Churchill, a subaltern in the auxiliary territorial service, accompanied her father as an official aide. It was her first visit to America.

When asked if he had seen the Falls before, Churchill replied, "I saw the Falls before you were born," and he explained that he first visited here in 1900. Asked if the Falls looked the same, he said: "Well, the principle remains the same. The water still keeps falling over."

The Churchill party was recognized by comparatively few along the route because of the secrecy surrounding the trip. Not more than 100 persons, most of them children, were on hand to watch the British leader board his train on the American side.

Strategy Task Goes On

Quebec, Aug. 12 (AP).—While Britain's Prime Minister temporarily shifted his base of operations away from Quebec today, British, Canadian and an advance guard of American military men continued a review here of the master war strategy of the Allies.

Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt will meet in Quebec later on for concentrated war discussions and a meeting of the British-American chiefs of staff.

Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King of Canada, with whom Churchill had been in consultation here for two days, remained in Quebec, along with the ranking military, naval and air advisers the two statesmen had brought along with them.

The only word during the day from Canadian officials was that military talks still were going on during Churchill's absence.

The time when the Prime Minister and Mr. Roosevelt will come to Quebec for war councils behind the walls of the city's famed old Citadel cannot be disclosed.

Archduke Otto Plans Flight to Montreal

Archduke Otto, pretender to the non-existent throne of Austria and sometime resident of Washington, made reservations last night for plane seats to go to Montreal, it was learned here.

Otto's Canadian visit would coincide with the United Nations parley scheduled for Quebec at which President Roosevelt and Winston Churchill are to discuss United Nations plans. Admitting having heard the report of the trip, the State Department withheld comment.

Italians Look To Quebec

By the Associated Press

Bern, Switzerland, Aug. 12.—Italians seemed to be looking anxiously toward Quebec tonight for some softening of the Roosevelt-Churchill "unconditional surrender" stand which might swing the door open for Italy to step out of the war.

Simultaneously, the Italian press suddenly altered its tone toward its Nazi ally—and from the Italian frontier came reports that German civilians still in Lombardy and other provinces of northern Italy had been advised by their consulates to prepare to leave. Several hundred already have left Milan, Como and other cities.

The Italian newspapers headlined their apparent hope that the Quebec conference would revise the two Allied leaders' Casablanca ultimatum. Thus, the intricate Italian situation—full of contradictions—swung back to a stage recalling the first days after Mussolini's fall, when competent European observers attributed Il Duce's drop and the rise of Badoglio's government to an effort to get the Italian people out of a war of which they have long been weary.

La Stampa and other Italian newspapers frontpaged the story of the meeting of the President and Prime Minister under such headlines as "Casablanca decision being revised in Quebec."

At the same time, the German war communique which heretofore has been frontpaged in large type alongside the Italian communique was relegated to the back page with small headlines and small type. The entire press refrained from editorials on Tokyo and Berlin, minimized the war in Russia and the Pacific and even gave the impression, said a Swiss telegraph agency dispatch, of a "neutral" attitude toward the military situation in Russia.

A Geneva dispatch to La Stampa declared that the "first point" of the Quebec conference would be revision of the Casablanca formula for unconditional surrender, the second a revision of the Allied military formula initiated with the Sicilian campaign.

While much of this could be wishful, nonetheless it apparently indicated clearly the desires and interests of the people and the government—which today intensified activity against former Fascists, increased the liberations of political prisoners and strove to improve relations of the government with workers.

February. They took towns 65 miles west of Kharkov but they were still 37 miles southeast of Lebedin, the farthest point reached last winter.

Soviet bombers lent support to this drive by bombing Poltava, 35 miles south of the nearest Russian troops on Wednesday night, the Moscow radio said. Large fires were reported.

To the north, the Russians stormed to within 25 miles of Bryansk and six miles of Karachev, a railway point between Orel and Bryansk. Another column was only four and three-tenths miles east of Karachev. Seven hundred Germans were killed in the fighting here.

Russian forces gained 6 to 8 miles over-all in their Bryansk offensive, capturing more than 100 populated places, the communique said.

Fifty-six German tanks were wrecked in Wednesday's fighting while 48 German planes were brought down on all fronts.

Another Moscow broadcast announced that in the last 22 months 155,000 Germans were killed by the famed Russian guerillas operating in small bands behind German lines. They derailed several hundred troop trains, disabled 259 tanks, destroyed 205 planes on the ground and captured 19 German headquarters, the broadcast said.

German broadcasts admitted that Russian pressure in the Kharkov area was "appreciably increased" in the last 24 hours, but explained that by the German "elastic method" of defense "some piece of terrain is left to the enemy here and there since possession of it is not worth excessive sacrifices in view of the general operative situation."

Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, Transocean military correspondent, in a Berlin broadcast recorded by the Associated Press, admitted that the fighting was "fluctuating"—a German term for losing ground.

But the fighting around Kharkov drew the spotlight in the Russian battlefront.

A great horseshoe encirclement had been clamped around the city of 800,000, Russia's third largest, with an escape opening of 37 miles between Kovyag and Zmiyev to the southwest. Only one of Kharkov's eight railways remained open and it appeared to have been disrupted and made untenable by a heavy Soviet bombing of Merefa, a rail junction 13 miles below the city.

All along a 500-mile winding front from Yartsevo, 31 miles from Smolensk, to Kharkov, the great summer offensive of the Soviets was beating against German bulwarks.

The Russians said officially that the Germans had rushed up several tank divisions from their reserve and thrown them into the battle north and northwest of Kharkov, but that Russian forces were grinding these down and continuing their advance.

The German communique, by implication, admitted Russian advances to the southeast of Smolensk, great central base 230 miles from Moscow, by saying:

"While in the southern part of this sector (south and southwest of Vyazma), operations have not yet been concluded, the Soviets were repulsed on all other fronts." The communique, broadcast from Berlin and recorded by the Associated Press, said fighting in the northwest caucasus, along the Mius River and the Middle Donets was minor. On the fight for Kharkov the Germans said "the great defense battle is continuing."

A propaganda broadcast said the Russians had been repulsed with the loss of 80,000 to 100,000 killed or wounded in striving for a third time to break through German lines south of Lake Ladoga in the Leningrad area.

Death of Reporter On Raid Confirmed

Bern, Aug. 12 (AP).—The International Red Cross today notified the New York Times office here that it had given up for dead Times Correspondent Robert R. Post, who has been missing since last February after a bombing mission to Wilhelmshaven, Germany. Post was a passenger-observer on one of the planes which made the raid from a base in Britain.

The Red Cross said it had received a report from Lieut. W. H. Gotke, one of two survivors of the plane, which crashed near Oldeburg, Germany, saying the Germans had told him they found 10 bodies in the wreckage, including Post's.

James G. Rogers, James F. King Given OPA Posts

James G. Rogers was appointed assistant general manager of the Office of Price Administration yesterday and James F. King was named deputy administrator in charge of information.

The appointments were announced by Chester Bowles, OPA's general manager.

Rogers has been with the office of War Information since January, 1943. He is a New York advertising man. King went to OPA from the Department of Labor where he was special assistant to the Secretary. He formerly worked on Baltimore and Washington newspapers.

least 20 enemy fighters and that escorting Thunderbolts and Spitfires destroyed three more. Crews reported that targets in all three cities were left flaming.

The air offensive against the continent continued into the evening when a strong force of medium bombers, escorted by fighters, streaked across the Channel in the direction of Cologne about 7 p. m.

RAF fighter planes were unusually active over the Straits of Dover during the evening. Formations crossed and recrossed to northern France for nearly two hours.

German fighter planes were encountered chiefly by the Fortress formations which pounded Gelsenkirchen, the battered oil refinery town 27 miles west of Dortmund on the Duisburg-Hamm Railway, but the Nazis threw up an explosive antiaircraft umbrella over all three cities, a joint American and British communique said.

Antiaircraft fire rising in umbrellas to as high as 34,000 feet and German fighter planes in heavy strength made the trip what the airmen call a rough day.

Lieut. Robert D. Metcalf of Sacramento, Calif., told of German flak so heavy and so high as to split up formations of the Nazis' own fighter planes. He added that he saw at least 100 fighters at one time and that they were "playing leapfrog" through the fire.

Bonn Main Target

A German broadcast said the brunt of the attack fell on Bonn, birthplace of Beethoven, only 15 miles southeast of much-bombed Cologne. "They were intercepted and many heavy battles were fought above the clouds," the broadcast said.

The triple raid by the precision bombers rounded out what less than two years ago would have been rated a series of heavy blows against the enemy but what now passes as just 24 hours of routine activity.

The RAF's heavy bombers rested last night after their previous night's 1500-ton raid on Nuernberg, but Mosquito bombers continued their swift attacks against enemy targets in the Ruhr and Rhineland. At the same time other RAF forces were shooting up railroad targets in France and the Lowlands and laying mines in enemy waters.

The Nazis retaliated during the night with their heaviest raid on England in several weeks, some 20 planes dumping bombs on an unidentified town on the south coast and killing eight persons. It was announced that 167 persons were killed in England by air raids during July.

While the British did not announce the targets of last night's enemy raid, the German high command identified the cities attacked as Bournemouth and Plymouth.

Spy Suspect Held In $50,000 Bail

New York, Aug. 12 (AP).—Roberto Lanas Vallecilla, 35, foreign language translator of the coordinator of Inter-American Affairs office in Washington, D. C., was held in bail of $50,000 today by United States Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter on a complaint alleging espionage. Hearing on the complaint was set for August 26.

Vallecilla, arrested in Washington by FBI agents, was returned here where the complaint was filed last Saturday.

'44 Ship Total To Equal '43 Construction

By Sterling F. Green
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Maritime Commission confirmed last night an "amicable settlement" had been reached on a tentative 1944 merchant ship construction program about the same size as this year's—around 20 million deadweight tons.

Of the total, 319 vessels will be the new, fast victory ships, on which the first keels will be laid in December. All will be completed in 1944, a commission spokesman said.

All the speedy C-type cargo vessels programmed for next year will be built, the spokesman said, adding a total of more than 500 fast ships—Victory and C-type—during 1944. This is about one-fourth of the contemplated objective.

Bulk in Liberty Ships

The bulk of the country's shipbuilding thus will continue to be concentrated on the slow-moving, mass-built Liberty ship, the output of which has permitted the United States to smash all shipbuilding records.

From other Government sources it was learned the new program probably will be presented to the combined chiefs of staff within a week or two, to be approved for conformity with overall war strategy.

These sources, who requested their names be withheld, characterized the new production schedule as a compromise ending a long tug-of-war between the Maritime Commission and the War Production Board.

The commission started out with plans for a large-scale, rapid conversion of Liberty ship yards to the Victory ships, while WPB argued for a less drastic change-over on grounds abrupt conversion would cause a possibly dangerous drop in total launchings and a heavier outlay per vessel in materials, manpower and construction time.

411 Victory Ship Pacts

The commission, in fact, had already let contracts for 411 Victory ships for next year. Ninety-two have been dropped, the commission spokesman explained, in line with a decision to use only gears and turbines for propulsion machinery. The 92 vessels were to have been powered with a different type of engine.

A few shipbuilders who expected to construct Victory ships will have to go on making Libertys, the spokesman said, but he added his belief that "only a couple of yards" would be so affected. More Victory ships contracts may be let, the spokesman said, if gears and turbines become available.

The dispute has been watched with keen interest for the decision is weighted with significance for this Nation's influence on postwar world trade.

London, Aug. 12 (AP).—Civilian air raid casualties in Britain during July were 167 killed and 210 injured, it was announced officially today.

Matteotti Slayer Held

London, Aug. 12 (INS).—Mussolini's American-born triggerman, Amerigo Dumini, one of the murderers of the Italian Socialist leader Giacomo Matteotti, has been arrested by the Italian police, Reuter's said today, quoting Italian newspaper reports.

Matteotti, one of Mussolini's most feared enemies, was kidnaped in a car by Dumini and his accomplices in June 1942. Three days later his body was found in a lonely spot near Rome.

Under the pressure of public opinion, Dumini and his fellow-murderers were brought to trial and sentenced to long-term imprisonment. But on order of Mussolini they were released three months later.

U. S. Buying African Wheat at $2.10 Per Bu., Brewster Says

By Daniel De Luce
Associated Press Sports Writer

Algiers, Aug. 12.—U. S. Senator Ralph O. Brewster (Republican) Maine, asserted today that the American North African Economic Board is contracting for large amounts of local wheat at prices 50 to 60 cents a bushel higher than in the United States.

The Senator, a member of the Truman Committee, who is here with four other U. S. Senators on a tour, says he was "startled to discover a contract by which the American Government will be paying $2.10 a bushel for North African wheat for unknown future purposes."

Brewster said local French authorities had raised wheat prices twice in the last three months "and don't seem particularly anxious for us to buy up stocks."

Brewster leveled a general criticism of "lack of coordination and unification" against American civil agencies functioning in North Africa, including the Lend-Lease Administration, the Board of Economic Warfare and the Office of Foreign Relief and rehabilitation.

Brewster also attacked a laxity of gasoline consumption which he said was evident in North Africa, while in Maine "we are doing without more gas than they are here."

He spoke at a press conference at which Senators Richard B. Russell (Democrat) of Georgia, James M. Mead (Democrat) of New York, and Albert B. Chandler (Democrat) of Kentucky also participated. The fifth member of the party, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. (Republican) of Massachusetts was absent on a tour of Sicily.

Senator Russell was asked by a "Stars and Stripes" sergeant-reporter what the attitude of Congress was toward keeping draftees in service after the war for an international police force.

Russell replied, "I believe we could get enough volunteers to do any police tasks like that and those who want to go home will be able to go."

Mead, a fellow member of the Truman Committee, backed up most of the facts cited by Brewster.

Mead said Alexander B. Royce, American director of War Economic operations in this theater, defended the wheat contract on the grounds it afforded reserves for future emergencies, saved shipping space and was not made under local French pressure.

Royce later told correspondents there was no hard and fast contract negotiated yet, but a deal to apply "lend-lease in reverse" was being considered.

He admitted the wheat price would be higher than that in the United States but professed an inability to confirm the Senator's figure of $2.10 per bushel.

Cite Strict Gas Control

By the Associated Press

Gasoline is doled out to French North African civilians under rigid controls, officials of the Army-Navy Petroleum Board said today.

Office of Economic Warfare officials, however, had "no information" on the purchase of Algerian wheat at $2.10 per bushel which Senator Brewster of Maine mentioned.

More Gasoline For Autoists of East Assured

as the result of the vacation gasoline allowance permitted by OPA and the limited staff.

Allowance Doubled

In effect, the anticipated orders will result in allowing Easterners with A coupons to use three gallons of gasoline in one week, as against the present provision that forces them to spread three gallons over two weeks.

On the other hand, motorists in the Midwest would have their allowances cut from the present four gallons back to three, the same as would be allowed in the East.

B and C coupons would be raised in value, in the East, from the present two and one-half gallons each to three gallons each.

A coupons are issued to the ordinary motorist who does not have to use his car in connection with his work. B coupons are issued to those who must necessarily drive to and from their work. C coupons are issued to those who have to drive more than approximately 450 miles a month.

Ickes' Position

Earlier in the day Petroleum Administrator Harold L. Ickes reiterated his opinion that gasoline allotments should be equalized all over the country, while withholding any comment on the report of the new liberalization order.

Ickes said, however, that gasoline stocks in the East had dropped considerably, "but not alarmingly," during the past week. He added that the "big inch" pipe line to Phoenixville, Pa., had started operating yesterday with an "increasing trickle" of crude oil from Texas fields.

Last week the local OPA discontinued its policy of naming special panels to hear pleasure driving cases and sent its inspectors to monitoring restaurant prices in accordance with the rollback order on establishments.

13 Owners Penalized

Meanwhile six local boards penalized a total of 13 automobile owners for violations of the pleasure driving ban, District OPA announced yesterday.

Board 61, Whittingham and Lane pl. ne., heard four cases and penalized Theodore M. Gault, jr., 1347 Emerson st. ne., one A coupon. The others were continued or dismissed.

Board 42, 20th and Evarts sts. ne., heard three cases, dismissed one and penalized Tilmon O'Bryant, 1833 I st. ne., and George Scott, 3110 Central ave. ne., four A coupons each.

At Board 11, 1740 Massachusetts ave. nw., four cases were heard, two dismissed and two drivers penalized. They were Frances Moeller, 1832 Calvert st. nw., one A coupon, and Everett Price, 1930 Calvert st. nw., whose ration book was suspended for three weeks.

Of seven cases heard by Board 30, 7th and I sts. sw., four were penalized: S. E. Cole, 1214 Canal st. sw., two A coupons; Bruce M. Wahl, 1531 1st st. sw., one A; Frank R. Marquart, 1812 G st. nw., one A; and Michael Roscoe, 462 Maryland av. sw., two A's.

In an earlier hearing at Board 60, 14 cases were dismissed and two penalized: David Walters, 401 Newcomb st. se., one A; and William W. McClean, 3709 S st. se., one A.

At Board 10, 1350 Pennsylvania av. nw., Arthur Tillman, 1747 11th st. nw., was fined two A coupons and William Edwards, 1919 14th st. nw., was fined two A's.

City Editor's Act May Save Girl

hours to live, unless she gets the new drug, penicillin. It is her only hope. The doctors have used sulfa drugs and everything else. I must find someone with enough to help her. Can you help me?"

The editor lost no time.

Five and a half hours later Patricia Malone's doctor administered the drug.

At 11:30 a. m. today Dr. Dante Collitti, the physician who administered the drug, reported the little girl was improving.

"She is still living and is slightly improved," the doctor said. "It is difficult to say whether she will pull through, but the next 48 hours will tell the story."

The city editor had put in a call for the U. S. Public Health Service Surgeon General in Washington. He had a canvass made of New York drug firms to learn where penicillin would be available. Finally his search narrowed down. The call to the Surgeon General's office produced results, and the editor was referred to the E. R. Squibb & Sons Research Laboratories in New Brunswick, N. J.

Arrangements were made for police of two States to escort the precious shipment to the bedside of the ill girl. At 7:30 p. m. the drug was delivered to the hospital.

Dr. Collitti breathed a sigh of relief.

"Now we have a fighting chance," he said.

Wanted by Fleischmann! Good Judges of Good Whiskey To Try a Great New Brand!

TASTE! BODY! AROMA! These are the three qualities of a superb whiskey—and in Fleischmann's PREFERRED you find all three! The taste is rich, delicious! The body round, and full! The aroma, delicate!

Wouldn't You Like to Serve a Whiskey that has the Full, Ripe Richness of the World's Finest, Most Limited Brands? If you would, now you can! Read why!

● This invitation is written for the few men who are really good judges of good whiskey . . . who can appreciate a whiskey that it as gloriously rich, creamy and delicious as the world's finest, most limited brands—and who do not need a high price to confirm them in their judgment.

We set out several years ago to see if we could make such a whiskey. We spared no expense. We experimented. We drew from the world's choicest reserves. We selected the finest grains, and backed them up with the world's most delicate skill.

The result is—Fleischmann's PREFERRED, one of the world's most remarkable whiskies. Velvety! Creamy! Full! Delicious! We are sorry that we can offer Fleischmann's PREFERRED only in limited amounts as all our distilling facilities are devoted 100% to the war effort. If your dealer has Fleischmann's PREFERRED, try it! You'll always be glad you did!

THE WORLD'S GREATEST "MANHATTAN"? We say so! Take 1 dash of Angostura Bitters, ¼ oz. sweet vermouth, and 1½ oz. of Fleischmann's PREFERRED! Stir with ice, strain into 4-oz. glass, add one Maraschino cherry!

FOR AN "OLD FASHIONED" that tastes like cream — to ⅓ level teaspoon granulated sugar, 2 or 3 dashes of bitters in an Old Fashioned glass, add just enough water to dissolve sugar. Muddle! Add ice cubes, 1½ oz. of Fleischmann's PREFERRED. Garnish with cherry, twisted lemon peel, or orange and pineapple!

FLEISCHMANN'S PREFERRED BLENDED WHISKEY

FLEISCHMANN'S PREFERRED Blended Whiskey. The straight whiskies in this product are 4 years or more old; 35% straight whiskies, 65% neutral spirits distilled from grain. 90 Proof.

Liberators Pound Japs' Kurile Isles

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Mighty Army Liberators, racing down the main skyroad between America and Tokyo, have delivered their second batch of bombs to the Kurile Islands, key northern outposts in Japan's ocean defense ring, the Navy announced yesterday.

The four-motored bombers hit the targets they went after, and like the long-range attackers who struck the Japs on Wake Island in recent weeks, the Kurile raiders took a heavy toll of defending planes.

Forty enemy fighter planes intercepted the heavily armed American planes, and at least five were shot down, according to the official war bulletin. Others were probably destroyed or damaged.

Probable Hop-offs

Nine Liberators went out on the raid, presumably from the American air base at Amchitka in the western Aleutians, 1000 miles away, or possibly Attu, some 200 miles closer to the Kuriles. Two bombers are missing, the Navy said.

In sharp contrast to the Navy's official account were Japanese propaganda claims which accompanied their broadcast announcement of the raid earlier in the day. Japanese radio accounts reported five Liberators and three Flying Fortresses took part in the raid, and said that three were shot down, with a loss of one Japanese plane.

Japan Warns of More

The Navy said nothing of what would come next, but the Japanese radio spokesmen warned outright that "further appearances from the north are to be expected."

It was the second long-range air blow at the northern Nipponese islands since the Jap defenders of Attu were eliminated May 30. The first raid was aimed at the naval establishments and other defensive installations on Paramushiru July 19. Fires were started and near hits were scored on shipping in the Paramushiru Straits, and the American planes returned without losses.

Main Object Attained

In the number of defending planes that met the second bombing mission were signs that the earlier raid had fulfilled one of its main objects, to advance the Pacific-wide strategy of forcing the Japanese to spread their available material thin to meet attacks at any point. In contrast with the 40 defending planes that met the latest raiders, the first mission ran into only light antiaircraft fire.

The attackers were believed to have started from their base at night, so as to be over their targets in the early morning. They hit the Japanese installations at 8:11 a. m. Thursday, East longitude time, or 6:11 p. m. Wednesday, Eastern wartime.

"Numerous hits were scored in the designated target areas," the communique said.

Japs' Pearl Harbor

Where in the numerous Kurile islands the targets were located, was not stated in the Navy's communique. It was expected that the main blow may have fallen again on the Paramushiru installations, which have been described as Japan's Pearl Harbor of the North, but the Navy account did not exclude the possibility of attacks on others of the island chain.

The Kuriles run from the main islands of Japan north to the Kamchatka Peninsula on the mainland. Paramushiru is at the northern end, a 12-by-55-mile strip of volcanic territory with rockbound coasts and several harbors.

While telling about the Kuriles raid, the Navy maintained its silence of nearly two weeks about operations in and around Kiska, last Japanese-held outpost in the Aleutians.

Cook Is Promoted To Vice Admiral

Jacksonville, Fla., Aug. 12 (AP).—The promotion of Rear Admiral A. B. Cook, chief of Naval Air Operational Training for the last 15 months, to the rank of vice admiral and his transfer to San Juan, Puerto Rico, as commandant of the Tenth Naval District and commander of the Caribbean Sea frontier, was announced today by the Navy Department.

No successor to Admiral Cook has been named. However, Capt. Arthur Gavin, who recently became commandant of the Jacksonville Naval Air Station, has been designated as acting chief of naval air operational training.

Roosevelt Approves Postwar Plan Drive

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt has approved a campaign being conducted by some legislators to arouse public interest in international collective security proposals but has delayed a decision on whether to seek a Senate showdown on the issue this fall, a reliable authority said yesterday.

The unofficial authority said there was no doubt that both the President and Secretary of State Hull would like to have a statement from the Senate pledging this country's cooperation in some form of postwar world organization to preserve the peace.

Would Avoid Wrangle

But he said the President was not at all sure that any such proposal would be approved by the two-thirds Senate margin necessary to ratify treaties and until he can be given some reasonable assurance that the votes could be obtained, is not likely to show his hand publicly on the issue.

"The President would rather have no declaration at all than one obtained after a bitter Senate debate and approved by only a bare majority, he asserted.

For that reason, the spokesman forecast a careful examination of Senate sentiment after legislators return to Washington. If Administration leaders decide the signs are favorable, they will push for early action, probably with the President's open support, he said. If opinion remains divided, however, more delays may be in order.

Senators' Resolution

In an announced effort to arouse public demand for their proposal, a dozen or more legislators have been touring the country in support of a resolution by Senators Hatch (Democrat) of N. Mex., Hill (Democrat) of Alabama, Ball (Republican) of Minnesota and Burton (Republican) of Ohio. Their resolution calls for formation of an international organization to put down future aggression by force.

In this connection, the President was represented as having assured some of the legislators his recent statement that this is "not the time to engage in an international discussion of all of the terms of peace and all the details of the future" did not mean he opposed the formation of general policies.

Home Heating Outlook Raised By Army Action

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

The War Department and the Solid Fuels Administration disclosed plans yesterday which directly and indirectly will help relieve currently ominous conditions affecting the warmth of the home front next winter.

The War Department said it expects an annual saving of 30,508,632 gallons of fuel oil from conversion to coal at Army posts and ordnance plants in the Eastern oil shortage area, thereby relieving by that much the drain on overall supplies.

The conversion program, the department said, will result in saving more than one-third of the fuel oil requirements for Army installations along the Atlantic seaboard. In addition, huge savings have been achieved in other areas, it was said.

Meanwhile, Fuel Administrator Harold L. Ickes told his news conference that mine strikes last June and July have caused a loss of 3,500,000 tons of hard coal, thus making the attainment of this year's anthracite production goal of 65 million tons virtually impossible.

As consequence, he revealed, anthracite retailers will be limited to 90 per cent of their last year's requirements to assure equitable distribution, particularly to persons who have converted furnaces from oil to coal and for warworkers who are unable to obtain fuel in congested areas to which they have been transferred.

Ickes stated, however, that homeowners no longer will be required to convert their furnaces from oil to coal. This, he said, will henceforth be required only for commercial users of coal.

Although pointing out that "we are going to have trouble to supply the demand," Ickes said he believed hard coal rationing will not be required because "a type of bituminous coal suitable for household use" will be available.

In addition to limiting distribution of hard coal to retailers, Ickes said an intensive educational campaign will be conducted to prevent waste.

The allotment plan, it was said, will become effective as soon as details are worked out and will remain in effect probably throughout the winter unless production becomes great enough to meet all consumer demands.

Ickes stressed that "any future work stoppages will, of course, make the situation much worse."

The Army conversion program was started last September and is now nearing completion.

Brig. Gen. W. L. R. Covell, director of the fuels and lubricants division of the Quartermaster Corps, said, "When the Engineers started, they found that a total of 20,907,558 gallons annually were potentially convertible. Today, those same facilities are using only 249,000 gallons.

Ickes Calls Criticism, By OPA Unit 'Flyspeck'

Secretary Ickes was asked at his press conference yesterday to comment on recent charges by OPA's Labor Policy Committee that he participated in a billion dollar "steal" by pressuring for a 35-cents-a-barrel increase in crude oil for the petroleum industry.

After squinting reflectively a moment, the Secretary drawled, "Waal, what's a little thing like that—a fly speck in my checkered career."

Then, after a chuckle, "No comment."

Flight Officer Wounded, Not Dead As Was Reported

Flight Officer Edmund J. Beaulac, jr., 22, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund J. Beaulac, 100 Dresden st., Kensington, Md., has been reported wounded in action and not killed as erroneously reported in yesterday's Washington Post.

BEAULAC

He was copilot of a Mitchell bomber shot down by Japanese antiaircraft fire during an attack on Kiska in July. The men were rescued from the icy waters by a Navy flying hospital. According to the last report received by his parents from the War Department, Flight Officer Beaulac was injured only slightly and is having a perfectly normal recovery.

A native of Washington, he was a graduate of Central High School, where he was a track star. He was employed by the Washington Gas Light Co. prior to his enlistment in May, 1941. He got his wings at Columbus, Miss., July 26, 1942, and was sent on overseas duty in March of this year.

Army, Navy Executives Oppose Taxes Which Threaten Output

By the Associated Press

Army and Navy authorities taking part in current tax studies are counselling against any increases so steep as to destroy the incentive for fullest possible war production, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau disclosed yesterday.

Backed by the War Production Board, the armed services want to make sure that existing incentive systems—under which workers are swelling their incomes by putting forth greater efforts—are not nullified by taxation.

Thus a new factor entered the drafting of a program intended to raise an additional 12 billion dollars during the year beginning January 1. The Treasury already has indicated it is studying means to prevent inequitable tax burdens on persons whose incomes have not conformed to the upward trend.

Explaining to his press-radio conference the presence of Undersecretaries Patterson and Forrestal of the War and Navy Departments at the first of a series of exploratory tax conferences earlier this week, Morgenthau said they have a two-fold interest in taxes.

First he mentioned corporation taxes, saying both services want to keep the levies from getting beyond the point where business would not be interested in fullest war production.

Then he recalled that many industries are paying bonuses for increased prdouction by individual employes and that the services are "vitally interested" that the personal income tax should not be so high "it would interfere with the personal incentive to produce more."

Morgenthau declined to discuss any details of the initial conference but replied affirmatively to a question whether he thought progress had been made. A second meeting probably will be held next week, he added.

Try This Natural "Regulator" Food!

Don't lose hope, even if you've tried one harsh pill or cathartic after another, with no lasting relief! For many people there is a safe, pleasant way! One that doesn't prod your bowels—rob your system of water—or "sweep you out"! It's KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN!

The secret, scientists say, is that KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN "gets at" one big cause of common constipation—by supplying the cellulosic elements needed for normal evacuation—should they be lacking in the diet. These elements assist the intestinal flora in lightening and fluffing up the contents of the colon, for easy, satisfactory elimination!

Eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN regularly. Drink plenty of water. See if you, too, don't give up "dosing" — for good! Remember, too—ALL-BRAN is amazingly nutritious! Each ounce contains more iron than two eggs, more phosphorus than a glass of milk! Insist on genuine ALL-BRAN, made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

G.O.P. Can Capture 1944 Vote—Willkie

By the Associated Press

Rushville, Ind., Aug. 12.—Wendell L. Willkie, talking with Republican leaders of the Eighth Indiana congressional district at his home here today, said the Republican Party "should and can" win the next Presidential and congressional elections.

Disagreeing with the contention of some that the present Administration would be returned to office in 1944 if the war was not concluded at that time, Willkie said the Republican Party could win if it pledged that "necessary administrative and regulatory processes of Government will be conducted with competence and economy."

"We must have the imagination to present a realistic foreign policy based on exclusive recognition of the democratic forces in enemy and occupied countries," he said, "recognizing the wisdom of America's effective and active cooperation in world councils and treaties with other nations for the preservation of the peace; and for the establishment of stable mediums of international exchange and the elimination of unnecessary trade barriers to the end that there may be an enlargement of commerce among the peoples of the world. America must also give encouragement to the advancing forces of liberty throughout the world."

Urging an end to the "period when failure in private endeavor has been a passport to Government service," Willkie called for a domestic policy "founded upon unifying our people for the practical functioning of our economy under competent private management."

Returning to the prospects of the party for the coming election, Willkie suggested that Republicans repudiate "narrow nationalists; economically selfish people who think that Government exists merely for their own self-interest; the people who are afraid to fight or are unwilling to sacrifice unnecessary luxuries and who refuse to endure in wartime without complaint the restrictions necessary for the common good, and the religious and racial bigots."

"In other words," he added, "we Republicans must take the affirmative, eschew the negative."

Patrick Malin Is Named To Refugee Committee

The State Department announced last night the appointment of Patrick Malin of Joplin, Mo., as vice director of the Intergovernmental Committee on Refugees.

Malin, formerly professor of economics at Swarthmore College, was chief of the chemicals and drugs branch of the Office of Price Administration last year and at present is deputy chief of the division of program requirements of the office of foreign relief and rehabilitation operations.

CAN'T KEEP GRANDMA IN HER CHAIR

She's as Lively as a Youngster—Now her Backache is better

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

IF the Boren Committee really wants to dig below the surface in the newsprint situation, it might probe the lush bonuses paid by the International Paper Co. to its executives.

At a time when the paper cartel has been gouging publishers for higher prices and throttling newspapers by supplying less paper, it has also been paying juicy sums to International Paper officials.

Since 1930, International Paper has not paid a penny in dividends on its common stock. Yet at the same time International Paper has paid annual salaries of $412,250 to six of its officials. Then in addition to these salaries, the same officials got bonuses of $112,500.

President Richard J. Cullen received a salary of $102,000 plus an additional $50,000 paid every year toward a retirement fund.

The vice president, W. N. Hurlbut, gets a salary of $43,600 and in addition a retirement benefit of $10,000 annually. Also, Hurlbut has borrowed $25,833 from the company. There is nothing illegal about this, though borrowing by officials from their company is a special privilege and constitutes an additional burden on the company's financial position.

In addition to its officers and directors, International Paper also paid 14 other employes total salaries of $383,900.

Isolationist Cupid

The nuptial rumor that the Chicago Tribune's Col. Robert R. McCormick was going to wed Mrs. Helen Essary, widow of the Baltimore Sun correspondent, was told to the President recently by one of his aides.

Both Colonel McCormick and Mrs. Essary are ardent isolationists and vigorous critics of the Administration. In fact the colonel is considered the leading isolationist of the Midwest, if not the Nation, while the Widow Essary is probably the leading lady isolationist in the Nation's Capital.

So the President received word of this isolationist romance with considerable interest.

"I wonder," he mused, "what their progeny will be like."

NOTE—Later, Mrs. Essary heard about the President's remark and telephoned one of the White House aides to find out precisely what had been said. She did not comment as to whether the rumor of matrimony were true or untrue, but she showed great feminine curiosity regarding the President's comment.

Inside Europe

SWISS MINISTER Charles Bruggmann, brother in-law of Henry Wallace, is probably the only man in the United States who has recently passed through Germany.

He not only visited Germany, but also France and Spain. In France he found the people downcast and downhearted. German soldiers on the streets of Paris went out of their way to be polite to the French people, even got off the sidewalks if necessary in deference to a Frenchman. The Germans have played their cards cleverly to try to avoid French resentment.

In Germany the women wore black, but no smiles. Many Germans, Minister Bruggmann found, would rather submit to a British - American occupation than one by the Russians. Higher-class Germans fear the Russians tremendously. On the other hand, it is suspected, in some quarters that certain German groups might make a deal with the Russians to run Europe together.

There is more food in Germany, Minister Bruggmann found, than in France. In Paris he paid $40 for a meal for two people, and not an elaborate meal at that.

Spain is in better shape economically than at any time in some years, and seems to have recovered from the effects of its civil war.

Capital Chaff

THE PRESIDENT has told close advisers that he would not oppose a "constitutional monarchy," in Italy as long as it was a genuine one and permitted democratic processes to function as in England. . . Folks in Kentucky are puzzled over the mysterious "poor health" of Congressman Virgil Chapman, who is laid up in a hospital in Versailles, Ky., assertedly for injuries received when he stumbled while answering a telephone in the dark. This is the third time Virgil has retired to the hospital, usually registering under the name of "Henry Miller." Down in Kentucky, folks say: "Virgil sure must have a lot of accidents."

Day vs. Night Bombing

WHEN CHURCHILL and Roosevelt were in Casablanca the British Prime Minister had a friendly argument with United States air generals regarding the feasibility of daylight bombing. Churchill was against it, arguing that the British system of night bombing was much safer, did more damage to the enemy.

However, latest figures just received by the War Department show that Gen. Ira Eaker was right in sticking to day bombing. These figures show that United States bombers have knocked out Nazi fighter planes at a rate ten times greater than the British.

Here are the figures: In July United States airmen destroyed 500 Axis planes, lost 108 bombers of their own. In other words we knocked out five times as many planes as we lost.

In the same months the British knocked out 129 enemy planes, but lost 258 of their own. In other words, the British lost two planes for every one they knocked out.

The British were operating at night when they could not see the enemy so well, but also when they enemy could not see them. American planes, operating in the daylight, could better concentrate on enemy fighter planes, but also were better targets for the enemy.

Merry-Go-Round

WHEN SOUTH CAROLINA'S Senator Burnet Maybank voted against the Administration recently Walter Brown, in Justice Byrnes' office, mailed Maybank a copy of one of his campaign circulars. In it Maybank had vowed that he would support the President under all circumstances, come what may. Under this pledge Brown scribbled "Lest we forget, lest we forget," and mailed it to the Senator . . .

Riggs Bank Makes Shifts Of Personnel

Robert V. Fleming, president and chairman of the board of the Riggs National Bank, announced yesterday that due to the resignation of Robert V. Mellefont, assistant manager of the Park Road Branch of the bank, to accept the position of vice president and cashier of the National Capital Bank, of this city, Peyton B. Fletcher, jr., who has been assistant manager of the 7th and I sts. branch since December, 1939, has been transferred to the Park Road branch as assistant manager.

During World War 1, Mr. Miller served in the office of the paymaster general of the United States Navy, and he enjoys a wide acquaintance among Army and Navy, circles, as well as the residential set of Washington.

Mr. Fleming said that Mr. Miller's promotion is in line with the bank's policy of promoting from within the organization and is in recognition of Mr. Miller's excellent service to the institution.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Car Loadings Off

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday that 872,076 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ended last Saturday. This was a decrease of 13,437 cars, or 1.5 per cent, compared with the preceding week; an increase of 21,856 cars, or 2.6 per cent, compared with the corresponding week a year ago, and a decrease of 6,428 cars, or 0.7 per cent, compared with two years ago.

Business Activity Up 25.3%

Business activity as reflected by the value of checks cashed was 25.3 per cent greater in the past three months than during the corresponding period last year, the Federal Reserve Board has reported.

The board placed the May-through-July total of debits to deposit accounts of reporting member banks at $196,488,000,000 compared with $156,822,000,000 in the same months of 1942.

The July total of $65,348,000,000 was $12,373,000,000 higher than a year ago but $1,546,000,000 under that of June, an income tax payment month, and $8,313,000,000 below the April peak, ascribed to the second war loan drive.

Coal Production Up

The National Coal Association, from incomplete car-loading reports from the railroads, estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended August 7 as approximately 11,750,000 net tons.

Production for the corresponding week last year was 11,090,000 net tons. Thus the week ended August 7 shows an increase of 6 per cent over the comparable week of last year.

The report of the bituminous coal division of the Department of the Interior shows production of 12,150,000 tons for the week ended July 24, 1943, and 12,100,000 tons for the week ended July 31.

Production January 1 through August 7, 1943, about 349,288,000 tons; January 1 through August 8, 1942, 345,433,000 tons.

Electric Output Gains

Electric output of the public utility operating companies in the Standard Gas and Electric Co. system for the week ended August 7, 1943, totaled 191,462,000 kilowatt hours, as compared with 159,644,000 kilowatt hours for the corresponding week last year, an increase of 19.9 per cent.

Electric output of the Northern States Power Co. for the week ended August 7, 1943, totaled 39,417,000 kilowatt hours, as compared with 34,117,000 kilowatt hours for the corresponding week last year, an increase of 15.5 per cent.

Rand Paid $272,466.86

Philadelphia, Aug. 12 (AP).—Remington Rand, Inc. of Buffalo, N. Y., paid James H. Rand, jr., president and chairman of the board, $272,466.86 during the 1942 fiscal year, the company's annual report to the Securities and Exchange Commission disclosed.

Stanley M. Knapp earned $100,216.47 and Harry Landsiedel, $106,263.87. Both are vice presidents and directors.

Union Oil Net Rises

New York, Aug. 12 (AP).—Union Oil Co. of California reported today for six months to June 30 net profit of $3,084,563, equal to 66 cents a share on the capital stock. This compared with $2,859,769, or 61 cents a share, in the first half of 1942.

Slight Drop in Sales

Chicago, Aug. 12 (AP).—Montgomery Ward & Co., mail order and retail merchandise firm, reported today sales for July, 1943, were $41,811,462, a decrease of 1.7 per cent of the sales for the same month a year ago, which totaled $42,520,745.

For the six months ending July 31, 1943, sales were $302,341,971, or 3.1 per cent more than $293,187,708 for the same period a year ago.

Share Listing Authorized

New York, Aug. 12 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange has authorized the listing of 1,388,746 additional $10 par common shares of General Motors Corp. incident to the acquisition of the Yellow Truck and Coach Manufacturing Co., according to a written agreement and merger plan previously announced.

The new listing will bring the total of General Motors' common stocks up to 44,888,746.

Stockholders of the Yellow Truck Co. will meet September 8 to act upon the reorganization plan.

Had NoReason, De Marigny's Murder Alibi

By the Associated Press

Nassau, Bahamas, Aug. 12.—A statement by Alfred De Marigny that a charge he murdered his multimillionaire father-in-law, Sir Harry Oakes, was "ridiculous, as I have no reason to do it," was read into the record of his preliminary hearing today.

At the same time, Crown Prosecutor A. F. Adderley sought to convince Magistrate F. E. Field that a fingerprint, the chief evidence used in an effort to link De Marigny with the slaying, could not have been made after Oakes' body was found.

From Police Maj. Herbert Pemberton of Nassau came testimony that De Marigny did not have access to his father-in-law's death room after the crime, nor to the paper-covered wooden screen on which other witnesses have told of discovering the impression of the accused man's right little finger.

Pemberton detailed police efforts to safeguard evidence once Sir Harry's bludgeoned and burned body was discovered the morning of July 8 in his bedroom on the second floor of his oceanside estate, Westbourne.

The handsome officer said he stationed three constables on guard, and himself told De Marigny not to go upstairs.

"At any time during the 19 hours that you were on duty," Adderley asked, "did De Marigny come on the second floor?"

"No, sir," replied Pemberton.

In his statement, read by Pemberton, De Marigny said:

"I can swear that I have not seen Sir Harry since March 29. I have not been in Westbourne in two years. That is all I have to say."

Capitol Rats Thin Out, So Does Trapper

"Maybe they should have been rabbits," mused Jim Young, Negro, official rat-catcher at the Capitol when he was returned to his former janitor job after single-handedly winning the war against the rodents yesterday.

"But they were as big as rabbits," Jim consoled himself as he laid away his leed pipe and traps and reached for a broom.

Arthur E. Cook, assistant architect of the Capitol, said he knew how Jim felt, but with only two victims of Jim's ability to play Pied Piper Boone bagged each week in the dark recesses of the Capitol there was nothing else to do but transfer him to his old job.

Jim was paid $120 per month and his figures close to $14 per rat, Cook said. Only six months ago, Cook said, Young's pay was per rat and in pennies, based on a weekly catch that reached a peak of 352 early this year.

But Jim found getting rid of the rodents was no simple matter. Big and ferocious from years of having things their own way at the Capitol, the rats refused to yield to ordinary extermination methods. They moved upstairs to the street floor, and gnawed holes through a revolving door reserved for use of the President.

That was too much, Cook said. He sought the aid of the District of Columbia Health Department, which concocted a tempting bait and mapped out a war based on unconditional surrender. Jim was made chief of staff and the staff as well. Armed with a piece of lead pipe and 200 traps he prowled into the inners of the Capitol, some of which had not been cleaned out since the War of 1812. One night Jim bagged 72.

But finally he got too good. The supply dwindled. Then it was Cook started figuring the pay against the few rodents caught.

"Yep," said Jim yesterday, "maybe they should have been rabbits."

Tax Revision Permitted

The Treasury ruled yesterday that individuals and partnerships holding war contracts may revise their 1942 income tax returns if their contracts have been renegotiated since the original return was filed.

civilian production on a large scale. Government production planners fear that such pressures have adverse effects on direct war production.

There was speculation that General Corbin decided to make the announcement at this time to discourage possible tendencies to hold down on war production because of the favorable war news by reassuring industry that it will be protected—not only by repayment of sums due to a sudden end of the war, but what may be more important to some manufacturers, by prompt repayment.

It is undedstood that production officials hope such announcement will serve to stimulate direct war production, rather than divert energy to consideration of postwar business problems.

Corbin indicated that "where goods to be made under a cancelled contract were in process of being manufactured, the goods would either be completed and purchased by the Government for ultimate disposal through other channels, or the contractor would be reimbursed for any loss suffered as a result of the cancellation."

Not a Forecast

Corbin made clear that the policy applied to partial as well as full cancellation of war contracts—indicating that it was already being applied in cases where the War Department has been compelled to cut back production programs as a result of changing strategic demands.

Officials cautioned against interpreting Corbin's comments as forecasting an early end of the war—pointing out that there is still every reason to believe that a long pull lies ahead.

The normal industry channels which provide for reimbursement of subcontractors by prime contractors will be used, Corbin said.

Arthur D. Whiteside, WPB vice chairman for civilian requirements, informed the committee that woolmaking facilities released by the Army would be needed for essential civilian type goods and lend-lease goods.

Kenneth W. Marriner, chief of the WPB wool branch, asserted that production of wool fabrics and yarns during the first half of this year was slightly greater than during the same period of 1942 in spite of manpower problems.

In revealing that Army requirements for wool products will be less next year, General Corbin pointed out that stocks on hand plus goods on order are expected to be ample for both original issue clothing and blankets and also for replacement purposes during the first part of 1944. He said that the "pipelines" through which Army material reaches Army fighting forces in various parts of the world have been adequately provided for as far as wool products are concerned and that continued heavy procurements are no longer contemplated.

General Corbin also stated that delieveries of 1944 procurements are expected to be at approximately the same rate as present deferred deliveries and that, therefore, in order to maintain a continuity of the operation of machinery, he expected to place further contracts in February.

Lieut. Charles Harding, speaking for the Navy, said that he did not expect any deferments in Navy deliveries during 1943 or in the early part of 1944.

Drought Besets Nearby Farms

prospects in many parts of the State and corn and late hay estimates are being reduced hourly. Small grains have suffered "greatly," according to the report from Richmond. That section of Virginia west of the Blue Ridge and a section in the southeastern part of the State have not been affected by the drought.

The Virginia potato crop is estimated at only 9,906,000 bushels, which is below the average but 37 per cent larger than last year when fewer were planted.

In the southern and shore counties of Maryland the same general condition prevails. C. E. Burkhead, agricultural statistician and D. B. Wilson, associate agricultural statistician of the University of Maryland crop reporting service, were to begin today a two-day tour of the stricken areas for the purpose of issuing a report to farmers early next week.

Rayburn Urges Army to Keep Axis Disarmed

McKinney, Tex., Aug 12 (AP).—America must contribute to an international army which will "disarm Germany, Italy and Japan and keep them disarmed," Speaker Sam Rayburn (Democrat) of Texas said today in dedicating an Army hospital.

"Within 60 days after the end of the war, sob sisters and sob brothers will start crying that the common peoples of Germany, Italy and Japan had nothing to do with this war," said Rayburn.

"This is rot. If it had not been for the common people of Germany, Italy and Japan there would have been no Hitler, Mussolini or Hirohito," he said.

All in Battalion Are Good Shots

New York, Aug. 12 (AP).—The Army was given something to shoot at today.

Maj. Gilbert F. Bell, commanding officer of the 518th Military Police Battalion, announced that during recent maneuvers in Maryland, 1132 officers and enlisted men of the unit marched to the rifle range and all qualified as marksmen, sharpshooters or expert riflemen.

Major Bell said the unit now has "more sharpshooters and more experts than there are marksmen." Firing 210 rounds, 242 qualified as marksmen with 140; 505 as sharpshooters with 160, and 385 as experts with 180.

Asthma Mucus Loosened & Sound Sleep Promoted First Night

For Thousands of Sufferers

Clicking, gasping, wheezing, recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma ruin your sleep and rob your blood of vitally important oxygen because you can't get air in and out of your lungs properly. But now it is no longer necessary to suffer from these terrible attacks without the benefit you may receive from a physician's prescription called Mendaco. Within a very short time after the first dose, Mendaco ingredients start circulating thru the blood, thus reaching the smallest as well as the largest Bronchial tubes where they usually quickly help liquefy, loosen and remove thick strangling mucus (phlegm), thereby promoting freer breathing and more restful sleep. In fact, Mendaco has proved so successful in helping thousands of sufferers from recurring spasms of Bronchial Asthma that it is sold under a guarantee of money back unless completely satisfactory. So get Mendaco from your druggist today.

The Destroyer Escort is hunting Hitler's pig boats. She's a sleek beauty with a lust for enemy subs. Maneuvering like a PT-boat, outstripping the speed of a surfaced submarine, carrying nearly the fire power of a destroyer, she has become one of our deadliest fighters. Because of her strength and speed, our merchant ships deliver more of the materials of war than at any other time since our declaration to help rid the world of a desperate enemy.

SUB BUSTER

Here's the DE —the Navy's New Ship that's Helping to Blast the Sub Menace

THE DESTROYER ESCORT is the youngest member of a distinguished family – the fighting ships of the U. S. Navy!

Power plants for all the D E's equipped with turbine-electric drive are designed and built by General Electric.

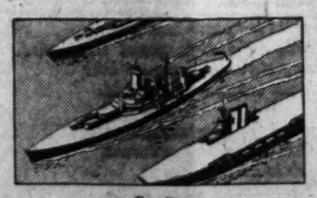
These turbine-electric units are tough little sluggers, so small that two of them—and two are used on each Destroyer Escort—fit into a single box car, and yet these two mites can drive 1700 tons of ship fast enough to overtake the speediest surfaced submarine.

All the way from the Destroyer Escort to the biggest battleship, G-E turbines are standard equipment. In fact, naval and maritime demands are so heavy now that EVERY TWELVE HOURS ANOTHER SHIP WITH G-E TURBINES HITS THE WATER!

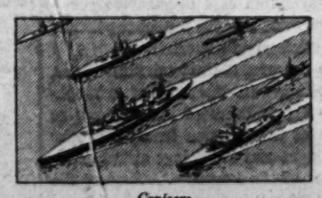
After this war is won, there will be similar propulsion units to drive a vast new U. S. merchant marine through the seven seas, to give America cargo and passenger ships faster and more economical than any we have ever seen.

General Electric Company, Schenectady, New York.

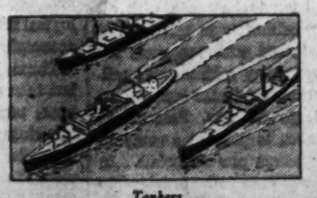
G. E. MAKES EQUIPMENT FOR THESE SHIPS:



Carriers and Battleships



Cruisers Destroyers and Submarines



Tankers and Freighters

★ In addition to the eleven million horsepower in this year's marine turbines, auxiliary power is produced by motor-generator sets. Control of this power is achieved with a variety of switchgear equipment.

Distribution transformers raise and lower power to required voltages. Motors and controls are used for machine tools, pumps, battery chargers, and turning gears. Combat vessels employ equipment for gunfire control.

The list of G-E marine products is almost endless: wire and cable, ship fittings, plastics, signaling equipment, fans, dental X-ray equipment, electric cooking equipment, instruments, and many others.

NEW "SECRET WEAPON" DISCLOSED BY NAVY

★ Recently the Navy made public what it termed an important "secret weapon"—one that allows our big warships to go farther and hit harder because they consume up to 35 per cent less fuel than the ships of any other Navy in the world.

That "secret weapon"—the high pressure, high temperature steam turbines used on battleships, destroyers, and cruisers—is no secret to G-E engineers, who have been working on its development for more than 40 years!

Today's turbines operate at 600 pounds pressure, compared with 300 pounds 15 years ago, and at temperatures up to 850 degrees!

To the Navy those improvements mean an increased range of 25 to 35 per cent for American ships, extending the time our ships can remain at sea, simplifying the supply problem.

FREE – available soon – "The Story of the Turbine"—24 pages—illustrated. Write now to General Electric, Dept. 6-215, Schenectady, N. Y., ask for GEB-129, and we'll send your copy as soon as it comes off the press.

Dog Days

When the weather makes the front page during a Washington summer, it's a sure sign that we are breaking records. Take our unique humidity for granted. Then add the past 11 days, during which the temperature has soared to 90 or above without fail, to the 18 days of steady above-90 heat in June, and the result is two man-sized heat waves in one summer. Still the warworkers have carried on, though this climate has been called even worse than Singapore's, Africa's, and India's. They have had to work through the long sweltering hours of a 6-day week sans siesta and sans even the promise of a cooling trip to the beach at weekends. They have done this uncomplainingly, because they know that war will not wait for a gentle zephyr or a full tank of gasoline. Perhaps they will find their reward, as veterans of such a Washington summer, in a measure of understanding of what our troops have had to endure in climates like Guadalcanal's, where the heat has proved even more formidable than the enemy.

Reconversion

It is often said that public consideration of peacetime conversion of industry is a damper upon enthusiasm for war. Hitherto this has retarded the development of necessary conversion plans. To our view the fear is unfounded. It is imperative that the country should be prepared to swing into the task of reconverting wartime industry to peacetime needs without interim delay or confusion. And, far from retarding the war effort, there is good reason to believe that a well defined plan of action would stimulate war production. For such a plan would be a reassurance to industrialists and workers who are wondering what fate awaits them when the fighting ends.

This is why we welcome the news that Chairman Nelson of the WPB is now developing a comprehensive plan of industrial demobilization for presentation to the special planning committee headed by Senator George. So far nothing of this kind has been attempted, though there has been lively discussion of general problems of demobilization and industrial reconversion. Such general surveys are valuable, because they provide a blueprint for the guidance of those responsible for the formulation and execution of specific programs. But they are only preliminary to the actual planning that has to be done if postwar chaos is to be averted.

Since we know neither when peace will come nor what our postwar commitments will be, all plans have to be highly flexible. Even before the war in Europe is over, a certain amount of industrial reconversion will take place. Indeed, it might occur on a fairly large scale if the war should enter a phase which reduced the demand for military supplies or radically altered the character of military demands. A recent change of production schedules calling for fewer heavy tanks and more locomotives provides a case in point. Moreover, the ending of the European war, while leaving us under the necessity of providing certain types of armament for waging war against the Japanese, would release much productive equipment for peacetime use in advance of complete cessation of hostilities.

Postwar plans have to be made with all these and other possibilities in mind. And they have to be linked with programs for reabsorption of returning soldiers and sailors. Civilian workers will also have to be shifted about in large numbers. Precautions will have to be taken to prevent a competitive scramble for scarce raw materials. In some cases funds will have to be provided to finance reconversion of plants. In other cases it may even be necessary to prevent overlavish use of funds by industries that are eager to attract civilian trade. As a result, some sort of over-all governmental supervision will be necessary for a considerable time to prevent what the WPB calls "industrial traffic jams."

One of the great dangers that the planners should seek to avoid is the over-rapid expansion of industries that manufacture durable goods for which there is an abnormally heavy unsatisfied demand. Pent-up demands for such things as automobiles, refrigerators, household equipment, etc., constitute a much needed backlog of demand which will provide employment for countless workers during the transition period. But when these pent-up demands for durable goods are satisfied there is likely to be a sharp slump in buying unless production has been spread over a fairly long period of time. In other words, demand, like supply, must continue to be regulated for a time after the war if we are to avoid an unbalanced kind of industrial conversion bound to cause trouble later on.

Waste In The Army

Waste of manpower, scarce materials and money is not the less serious in wartime because the Army and Navy may do the wasting. Both services ought to realize that, aside from the losses resulting from reckless use of our warmaking resources, waste has a demoralizing effect on civilians who are trying to support the war effort through small daily sacrifices. The report of the Camp Ritchie cook that from 300 to 500 pounds of fat trimmed from meat is burned in the incinerator every night makes the efforts of housewives to save fats and grease seem utterly futile. Worst of all, it suggests that some parts of the Army itself do not believe in the measures taken to conserve our national resources.

Congress has an unquestioned obligation to inquire into reports of unnecessary wastefulness. In making funds available to the Army and Navy to carry on the war, it has virtually written blank checks, as the accumulation of a pool of 203 billions in unexpended appropriations for war clearly shows. Few questions have been asked. Congress has found it utterly impossible to ascertain in detail the purposes for which vast sums are to be spent. It has appropriated nearly every dollar that has been requested, nevertheless, to make certain that our fighting forces be given all the equipment that the Nation can produce or the Army can advantageously use. The least Congress can do in these circumstances is to investigate every report that any part of these enormous sums is being carelessly spent.

Some allowance will have to be made for mistakes of judgment and extraordinary expenses in the early days of the war when the Army and Navy were expanding rapidly from comparatively small nuclei. We must remember also that modern warfare is a costly business in any circumstances. When full allowance for these facts has been made, however, the need for a continuous campaign against waste is obvious. Representative Dingell goes so far as to say that if we could eliminate all the waste in Army and Navy spending another tax bill might not be necessary. That suggests an appalling loss in the training, equipment and transportation of the men who are fighting our battles.

Even more serious is the waste of manpower in the Army. The fact that many have been trained and then released because they are over 38 represents a substantial loss because of an original mistake of judgment. Continued failure to assign some officers to any useful task reflects a laxity of organization that certainly ought not to be tolerated after 20 months of war when we have an acute shortage of manpower in civilian life. We hope that the Byrd Committee will probe into every form of waste in the armed services with the object of eliminating it where it exists and of scotching rumors about it where it does not.

Funny Bone

Are Americans becoming a humorless race? The writer of an editorial column in the New York Times suggests that maybe we are. Among other evidences of the gradual extinction of the American sense of humor he cites the disappearance of the old funny magazines such as Puck and Judge and the pre-Luceferian Life, the stereotyped and lugubrious gags wherewith the writers of radio scripts incessantly insult the goddess of laughter, and the appalling solemnity of nearly all contemporary literature. He might have added the tendency of comic strips to grow less and less comical. Then there is the curious tendency of things which ought to be quite ludicrous to seem quite awesome. Take, for example, jitterbug dancing and the zoot suit. Silk-slashed odd pieces or embroidered hose were always good for a laugh with Elizabethan audiences, just as references to derbies or peek-a-boo shirtwaists used to be on the old B. F. Keith-Orpheum circuit back in father's time. But with us such a phenomenon as a zoot suit becomes a symptom of a deep-rooted sociological malady and a theme for sober politico-economic articles and editorials.

These, to be sure, are not mirthful times, but then neither were the times of Aristophanes, nor—if you think of such things as the closure of the common lands, the poor laws, the plague and the doings at Tyburn—were those of Shakespeare. Maybe the trouble is that we just know too much, or think we do. If any such fellows as Sir John Falstaff or Sir Toby Belch were to turn up among us, we dare say the Alcoholics Anonymous would lose no time in bearing down on them. Mr. Pickwick or Mr. Swiveler could scarcely expect to be for very long out of the clutches of the psychoanalysts. The planned parenthood people would certainly go to work on the Micawbers and the Vicar of Wakefield. And we shudder to think of what might happen if a toeless pobble or a luminous-nosed dog were to turn up some evening at our favorite tavern or at the bar of the Cosmos Club.

Or maybe we were never really as humorous as we liked to think of ourselves as being. A search through the old files of Puck and Judge would, we suspect, show that most of the wheezes at which grandpappy laughed, while awaiting his turn to be shaved, were based on themes still staple in Hollywood and Radio City. Most of the supposed classics of American humor turn out to be not so much humor as satire, some of it, of course, like Artemus Ward and Mr. Dooley, very high-grade satire, though perhaps a bit too topical to have much interest now. Mark Twain, they say, made his countrymen laugh loudest when he intended to be most serious, and small-town American audiences used sometimes to laugh louder at Lady Macbeth than at the Porter or at Ophelia than at the gravedigger.

Kharkov

Reports from Russia say that the German high command has rushed considerable reinforcements to the Kharkov front to prevent that great Russian industrial center from again falling into the hands of the Red Army. This is not hard to believe. Following the loss of Orel and Belgorod, the loss of Kharkov would constitute a body blow to the Wehrmacht. It might even compel a wholesale withdrawal of German forces in the Ukraine from the present line to the Dnieper and that, in turn, might force a German withdrawal in the northern and central sectors of the Eastern Front as well.

Despite German efforts, however, the fall of Kharkov now appears imminent. The Red Army is converging on the city from three directions. Two of the railroads leading into Kharkov from the west have already been cut; the remaining rail routes are within range of Russian artillery. Too great a delay in withdrawing to a less exposed and more tenable position may mean a repetition at Kharkov of what happened to the Germans at Stalingrad.

Yet so far there are no indications that the German retreat on the Eastern Front is in any sense a rout. Every foot is being fought over. But it is clear that German defensive capacity is no longer able, as it was in the months after the Red Army's winter drive, to match Russia's newly demonstrated offensive power. On the far-flung Eastern Front as in the more restricted theater of Sicily the balance of power is swinging rapidly away from the Nazis.

Contact With Stalin

If Joseph Stalin, to the evident regret of Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt, is building no new bridges between Russia and her allies, some comfort can at least be found in the fact that he is not burning those that already exist. On Wednesday, for instance, the Soviet premier received the American and the British Ambassadors, Foreign Commissar Vyachesleff Molotov also being present. We can only assume from this action and the circumstance that it was given publicity in the Russian press and over the Russian radio that Stalin is anxious to make clear that his absence from the Quebec parley does not indicate any absence of good relations between Russia, Great Britain and the United States. And we have it on the authority of the Yorkshire Post, British Foreign Secretary Eden's mouthpiece, that Stalin is being informed of developments "almost hourly."

There is no disguising the fact, however, that it is a real disappointment to the London and Washington governments that it has proved impossible thus far to hold three-way discussions on matters of mutual concern to Russia, Great Britain and the United States. For the nearer we approach final victory, the more imperative it becomes that a comprehensive agreement be worked out by those powers. Otherwise we may find ourselves working at cross-purposes after the peace and thus losing the fruits of a victory won at so staggering a price.

For this reason the unconfirmed report that after the Quebec meeting Prime Minister Churchill may move on to Moscow is of real interest. Such a meeting would be less valuable than a meeting at which all of the Big Three were present. But it could still have its great usefulness. The barrier to a complete understanding with Russia must somehow be broken down and the sooner the better.

THE RETURN OF THE EXILES

Already 95 types of flowers and shrubs unknown for decades before the blitz have been found in London's bomb cavities.—News Item.

Deep in the bomb-torn crater
Where the city's wound is unhealed,
Spring strews blossoms no later
Than out in a lonely field.

Rescued from barren ages
Cold under brick and stone,
Earth in delight assuages
Her yearning for her own.

Stirred with the dream of living,
Bared to the sun and the showers,
She utters mute thanksgiving
With long-forgotten flowers.

Speedwell, rocket, and daisy,
Resuming their old domain,
Mantle drab clay with the hazy
Colors that fringe a lane.

Tendrils like frail green fingers
Clutch at the flame-seared wall,
And a dewy fragrance lingers
When blackness is over all.

Where ruin was scattered blindly,
Where the blight of death was laid,
April spreads blooms as kindly
As over a woodland glade.

Cost Of Living

By Mark Sullivan

The New Trend

FOR THE first time in nearly four years there has been an interruption of rise in the cost of living. A rise that was more or less continuous since the war began in Europe in September, 1939, became, for four weeks ending last month, a slight drop. That the turn was news, and welcomed by the Administration, is reflected by the spirit in which it was announced by Secretary of Labor Perkins, whose department is custodian of statistics about wages and prices.

What caused the turn? And will the new trend continue? Into the answer to both questions many economic factors enter, and some politics—both ordinary politics and labor politics.

Most observers would give the War Labor Board some credit for the turn. The board did draw a line against rising wage rates, and did hold the line. The limit they set for wage raises was 15 per cent above the level existing January 1, 1941. The conspicuous case in which they stood by the limit was that of Mr. John L. Lewis and his United Mine Workers.

THE BOARD not only refused a demand by Mr. Lewis for a straight raise in wage rates. It refused also pay for time spent in going from the mouth of the mine to the coal vein, called "portal-to-portal" pay. This, the Labor Board said, would have the same effect as a straight raise in rates. After the board's decision Mr. Lewis procured from the mine owners an agreement to grant the "portal-to-portal" pay, provided the Labor Board would sanction it. Decision on this point is just now pending. Common opinion is that the board will refuse. Firmness by the board has staved off demands for wage increases by labor leaders generally.

Labor leaders have taken the ground that they will waive demands for wage increases provided the Administration will bring about a reduction in prices of food to what was the level of September last year. This would mean a reduction in the prices paid farmers for crops.

To accomplish this, and accomplish it without detriment to farmers, the Administration has in mind a substitute device. The suggestion, in its present form, is that the Government itself become an immense buyer of crops, and seller of them. The Government would buy crops from farmers at prices satisfactory to the farmers. Then the Government would sell to dealers and consumers at prices satisfactory to the latter. Theoretically, both groups—farmers and consumers—would be satisfied.

THERE WOULD remain a third group, the taxpayers. These would pay the loss caused by the Government's operation. To describe the Administration's suggestion as a reduction in the cost of food would be more ingenious than correct. The cost of food would be whatever the Government pays the farmers, and that, presumably, would be somewhat higher than at present. The prices of food—which is different from cost—would be reduced by having the Government pay part of it.

To this subsidy proposal there is strong opposition in Congress. The opposition is not only on the ground of preventing expense to the Government and to taxpayers. The opposition comes also from farm leaders. While they would be glad to see the farmer get more for his crops, they oppose Government purchase for a special reason. They think Government purchase would be attended by more Government interference; more regulation of farmers. Resentment against regulatnon has come to be a definite sentiment held by farmers and farm leaders. It is felt, also, by Congress generally, Much of the regulation put in effect during the past 10 years has been repealed or otherwise ended. It is quite doubtful if Congress would appropriate the money necessary for Government purchase of crops.

Lately labor leaders have become less insistent in demands for higher wage rates, or other kinds of demands on the Roosevelt Administration. They have seen Congress pass a labor regulation act, the Smith-Connally bill. They have seen the President veto the bill and seen Congress pass it over the President's veto. Many labor leaders, though not all, have come to think that reelecting Mr. Roosevelt next year is their best hope of keeping the advantages Mr. Roosevelt's Administration has given them. In that belief, this group of labor leaders are working for a fourth term. Up to a certain point they are willing to refrain from embarrassing the Presideat by putting him under pressure for advances in wage rates.

The Fuehrer

By Paul Schubert

Divine Right Of Proletarians

AFTER HITLER, what?

This question has great bearing upon the future course of the war. Hence it affects all of us almost as much as it does the Germans.

It is generally believed that rule by Hitler and the Nazi party must be followed, in Germany, by a military dictatorship, with a general or group of generals assuming the top political command, governing the country by martial law carried out by the army.

It is generally felt that such a military putsch would be put through immediately it was believed that Hitler and the Nazi party had lost popular support, and that the result would be a strengthened Germany.

Strengthened, that is, in the sense that panic and anarchy would be avoided, and that the Reich would fight out the war rather than quit in confusion and disunity as Germans did in 1918.

THE QUESTION is, however, can a military dictatorship rule Germany? Or would the establishment of a military dictatorship be tantamount to civil war as the Reich divided, once more, into ruling class and proletariat?

Adolf Hitler's National Socialist Party set up as its ideal of politics the theory that rule should be placed in the hands of a nation's "born leaders"—"born" not in the old sense of upper class birth, but born with the "divine" and mysterious trait of leadership, however humble their origin.

This Fuehrerprinzip (leadership principle) is essentially flattering to the German proletarian. The National Socialist Party is essentially a proletarian party. Its full name is German National Socialist Labor Party. Hitler himself has always paraded his proletarian origin.

Inherent in Hitler's career has been the promise that henceforth Germany is to be ruled by similar Fuehrers who have emerged from the mass of the people to demonstrate their ability to lead. Part of the Nazi political structure has been the creation of a system of "Fuehrer Academies" at the head of the educational structure, where chosen youths are to be nurtured as potential major and minor Fuehrers.

Germans like authority. They respect power, and like government to be mighty and firm.

They no longer, however, like firm and mighty government as wielded by kings. Royal rule was forever blackened, in Germany, by the behavior of Wilhelm II in the national hour of crisis in 1918. The Kaiser's flight to Holland opened a gaping breach between the people of Germany and the House of Hohenzollern. As for Germany's lesser royal houses, none commands sufficient respect to win national loyalty.

NOR DO Germans like firm and mighty government as wielded by generals. Germans believe generals should practice soldiery and eschew politics. Germans imagine generals to be bluff, gruff, honest and brave—iron men on the battlefield but poor as diplomats and suckers at political bargaining. Germans might accept a military dictatorship as a desperate expedient, to hold the country together through an extreme crisis—but it would be a sign of extreme crisis. It would, in effect, proclaim defeat. It would be a sign that the generals had failed as soldiers. And the longer it lasted, the deeper the resentment the proletariat would feel.

From the proletarian point of view, military dictatorship would be considered "counter-revolution."

The German proletariat liked Hitlers' authority—the firmer and fiercer the better—because it was a demonstration that a simple proletarian could rise to the seat of might and outdo all kings and all generals as a symbol of the national Fuehrer genius inherest in every humble German. Hitler's lofty plans for world rule merely heightened his titillation of the national ego.

The German masses liked to see Hitler superior to the "well-born" Goering. Goering, whether he knew it or not, was the foil, the butt—never accepted by the masses, except as a symbol of the upper crust playing second fiddle to the Fuehrer.

Hitler had the masses in hand. He was the only German who had the masses in hand.

Hitler delivered the masses to the generals, in a two-way pact by which each side realized deepest heart's desire. The Nazis and the generals, together, could wage war—and wage it they did.

Apart, they will war against each other. It must be so, for that is the German temperament. Whether the generals believe they can rule Germany or not, German defeat will be swift once the hour of military dictatorship arrives.

Air Weapon

Interest in this section in a unified air arm for the United States is strong. Publication of the recent editorial from your newspaper, in the Salt Lake Tribune of yesterday, has increased the discussion of this subject here.

Maximum striking power for our air forces cannot be reached within the present framework, which is a divided authority and not capable of molding itself for the greatest blow against our enemies. Further intensified bombing can prove the second front which will bring Germany to defeat.

JENNINGS RANDOLPH,

Veterans' Hospitals

A meritorious proposal to decentralize veterans' hospitalization and recuperation centers after the war has been considered during the past few months by the South-Central Committee for Postwar Planning, with headquarters in Dallas, Tex. This committee, of which the writer is a member, was a part of the National Resources Planning Board's campaign to enlist local civic leaders and Government officials in the various sections of the country in an intelligent postwar plan for America's welfare. Though Congress has scuttled the NRPB, many of its postwar blueprints are complete, and will be ready to put into effect as soon as the war is over, if an alert citizenry demands them.

The plan is briefly this: Instead of a dozen or so huge Government hospitals for wounded veterans of World War II, with thousands of beds in each, it is proposed that several hundred smaller establishments be built as clinical and recuperative centers for the expected vast numbers of casualties. These 100-300-bed hospitals could be scattered about the country, roughly in proportion to the number of soldiers from each section, and would make it possible for every section of the country, except the most sparsely populated, to be 50 miles or less from a well-equipped hospital.

As soon as specialized repair work on critically wounded cases is completed, and for all less seriously wounded casuals, the veterans would be transferred to the smaller hospitals in their home locality. The therapeutic benefit of being in their home country, near to relatives and friends, cannot be overestimated. For the lower-income classes, visits to wounded loved ones would be impossible unless a plan like this is adopted, because of the travel expense involved.

Then as the beds are vacated, either through recovery or death of the veterans, the hospital will become available to the community. Practically no part of rural America, and very little of the low-income segments of urban America, have ever had access to decent clinical or hospital facilities. In this manner, it will be possible to build up to one hospital bed for every 300-400 people, in all sections of the country, rural and urban.

During the past 20 years we have seen the virtual disappearance of the country doctor. Our excellent modern medical schools teach their graduates to use the best of scientific equipment for diagnosis and treatment. Without this equipment the young physician feels he will operate at less than his full efficiency, and he fears that he will gradually get out of touch with developments in his profession. Accordingly, he shuns the country town, where his equipment would be limited to the instruments he could afford from his meager income, and enters the most completely equipped clinic he can find. In the past these have practically all been in the cities. Many young doctors from the country districts would psefer to practice among their friends in their home districts, and the establishment of hundreds of clinics and veterans' hospitals will enable them to do so.

In summary, these are the main features of the plan:

1. Recuperation of veterans near to home and relatives.

2. Well-equipped clinics and hospitals available to every section of America.

3. Young physicians once more able to become country doctors, with complete modern equipment for diagnosis and treatment.

At a meeting in Dallas earlier this year, two prominent members of the medical profession sat with the committee: Dr. E. H. Cary, past president of the American Medical Association, and Dr. Felix Underwood, top-ranking public health official from Mississippi. They have offered to guide the South Central Committee for Postwar Planning in its relationship with the professional groups, in order that the ultimate in cooperation may be achieved. These two eminent physicians are enthusiastic about the work of the committee for better health and welfare for low-income rural and urban America after the war.

More Than Peace

I am a constant reader of "Letters to the Editor" and enjoy most of them, but that Mrs. Cooksey burns me up.

In this morning's paper she stated that "The American people want nothing as much as peace," and from further statements, I think she blames our President for not having it. We want peace, Mrs. Cooksey, but it must be an honorable peace. We won't tolerate abuse nor attacks from other nations just to have that peace.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

To The Normandie

Nice work, old girl!
Just one more grunt or two
And you'll be rightside up
Or nearly so!
Ah, what a fate was yours!
How deeply hurt your pride
For eighteen months in such
A pose undignified.

A glamour girl, a deb,
A beauty famed and great.
Then suddenly that dark
And cruel twist of fate!
A regal princess sleek
With beauty oh, so clear—
Then suddenly—kerplop!—
Slammed rudely on your ear!

"Mud in your eye!"—this was
A toast you often heard
And always did it seem
So far-fetched and absurd;
Yet in the mud you writhed—
And muck swept through
The white and gold and pink
That once was you!

You seemed so done for,
Mangled, hurt and spent;
Your once lithe body
Battered, bruised and bent,
That, looking at you
Through the stricken months,
The doubtful murmured
"Was she pretty ONCE?"

And now, old gay,
Your youth comes rushing back.
There's color in your cheeks—
And "oomph" again you pack;
Oh, you'll need primping up;
You still look rough,
But, girly, you're the kind
That has the "stuff!"

A little longer, baby;
Chin up, kid,
And they'll be saying
"Look what Normie did!"
Then, radiant and bright
You'll sail again
With joy erasing all
Those months of pain.

L'envoi

But when your vibrant beauty is restored
No one should ever make the crack to you,
"You look so grand; say, ain't it wonderful
My darling, what those mud-pack treatments do!"

The best title for anything we have seen for months is that of "Rough on Rats" for a Government poster by Saul Tepper depicting an American gunner getting the range on the foe.

We hear that the reported military control of Germany, with Hitler benched, is known as the AHA—Anti Hunch Administration.

The uniform Adolf swore he would never take off until Germany had won the war appears to have been removed for delousing.

Core Of Fascism

Certainly the most vicious propaganda in connection with the war is the persistent implication heard everywhere that Mussolini, Hitler and their respective party men represent the real core of fascism and that when these men are punished, those responsible will have paid.

Obviously the real core of fascism is not to be found in these leaders and party men at all. Wiping them out will not eradicate fascism. The focal point of this infection is to be found in those interests which taxed themselves so much a ton, so much per piece of goods manufactured, to subsidize the dictators of both countries. These interests put these party men in power.

Are the Allies going to cover up the responsibility of the real criminals, those eternal "men higher up," while centering their campaign of hate only on the paid dupes of the powers that be?

Invasion Of Dies

Your editorial in today's Post on invasion of the executive province by the legislature was very encouraging for those of us who would like to serve our Government if we can do so and keep our self-respect. No American who is at all concerned about freedom would care about working under conditions in which a mere accusation is sufficient ground for loss of position. People who submit to that sort of thing are paying very dearly for their jobs, and are debasing themselves in accepting such goings-on placidly. More power to Mr. Bovingdon.

Quebec Conference

By Ernest Lindley

Russia Big Question Mark

IT HAS been just two years since President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill held their first meeting, "in a Newfoundland bight," as Churchill later described the location. The seed of this meeting had been sowed by Harry Hopkins on his first visit to Britain, January - March, 1941. Hopkins made the most effective substitute contrivable for face-to-face talks between Roosevelt and Churchill. He knew the President's mind completely, and he gradually came to know Churchill's almost as well. But he realized that there was no real substitute for a meeting of the two principals.

LINDLEY

Hopkins returned to London in July, 1941, ostensibly to work on lend-lease problems, but partly to review the situation resulting from the German invasion of Russia, and also to arrange the meeting of the President and the Prime Minister. Hopkins found that Churchill was more optimistic than the generals—both British and American—about the strength of the Red army. At that time, most professional military experts were predicting that the Soviet Union forces would be overwhelmed in from three weeks to three months. The President and Hopkins also were more optimistic than the generals. However, nobody had much real information. The Russians remained secretive. British and American military attaches in Moscow were in the dark. It was Churchill who suggested that Hopkins fly to Moscow and see what he could find out.

HOPKINS GOT back to England just two days before Churchill and his staff from the Foreign Office, Army, Navy, and RAF, sailed on the Prince of Wales for the Atlantic conference. Outwardly that conference will be remembered for the Charter, promulgated by the President and Mr. Churchill—a document perhaps less significant because of content than because of the alliance which it implied, and to a degree effected, between the principal English-speaking democracies.

The undercover sensation of the conference was, however, the report which Harry Hopkins made on Russia. Stalin had shown him confidential figures on Russian production, trained manpower, and other factors entering into the Russian war-making potential. He had predicted firmly that the Germans would not get to Moscow in 1941. Stalin had proposed that Hopkins verify with his own eyes, insofar as he could, Stalin's accounting of Russia's ability to hold out and keep on fighting. Hopkins turned aside the proposal. He didn't have time to look around, and probably realized how little he could have learned just by looking. He took at face value what Stalin told him.

The first Churchill-Roosevelt conference might have been named for the shores off which it was held. But appropriately it was named for the body of water which ties together the destinies of Britain and the United States; and appropriately it was held aboard naval vessels, symbolizing the intent of the two greatest sea powers to continue to control the oceans.

BUT IN hot weather it is appropriate also not to confer too far south. The practical factor of climate probably had much to do with the selection of Quebec for the second midsummer meeting of the President and the Prime Minister. (Their intervening meetings were: Washington, December, 1941-January, 1942; Washington, June, 1942 (which was hot enough); Casablanca, another midwinter session, January, 1943, and Washington, May, 1943. Also, in common courtesy, the Prime Minister should not be expected to do all of the traveling, although he is freer to move than the President is. The British public, moreover, might become critical if all the meetings were held in Washington. Finally, there were good reasons for honoring Canada which, like some of the other members of the British Commonwealth and, for that matter, some of the non-British smaller nations, has felt somewhat slighted.

The prospects before the world have changed vastly since the first Roosevelt-Churchill meeting two years ago. Out of that and ensuing meetings has developed elaborate but well-run machinery for coordinating the war programs of the United States and Britain. No comparable interlocking of the affairs of two great allies, on the basis of equal partnership, is to be found in history. Almost literally, as Mr. Churchill has said, we are fighting as one army, one navy, and one air force.

But, as at the first conference, Russia is a big question mark. The main questions now are whether the Russians will choose to fight until Germany has surrendered unconditionally, and, if so, what they will do after that. These are uncomfortable questions, but less awful than the big question of August, 1941, to which Hopkins brought from Stalin what proved to be the correct answer.

High Costs Hurt Millions

Declining Standard

More than 20 million person who depend on fixed low wages, pensions, or allotments, or meager Government checks, are experiencing a seriously declining standard of living as a result of increases in the cost of living, the Office of War Information reported yesterday.

Particularly hard hit are nine million dependents of men serving in the armed forces who are dependent on Government allotments, OWI said.

Nearly 2.2 millions are aged persons on State public assistance rolls; another million are disabled veterans drawing pensions or disability compensation and the widows and children of veterans.

Others affected include 158,000 retired and disabled firemen, policemen, and State and municipal employes, 739,000 children supported by State and Federal funds, 53,000 blind persons, 700,000 who have retired under the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance program, and more than 400,000 living on annuities which they paid for out of their savings.

Another group cited by OWI are six million city, county, State and Federal Government employes. OWI pointed out that their incomes are fixed, although it acknowledged that Federal workers and some State and municipal employes received adjustments recently.

'41 Pulp Level Held Possible

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 12.—Restoration of newsprint supplies to 1941 levels should be possible with 20,000 additional men in the American pulpwood industry and a comparable increase in Canadian woods manpower, Representative Lyle H. Boren (Democrat) of Oklahoma said today while discussing the paper situation with manufacturers.

Boren, chairman of a House subcommittee investigating newsprint supplies, said after informal conferences of the group here there were two approaches to a solution of the shortage.

"The present approach is merely dividing up the shortage," Boren declared. "Increased production of pulpwood is the intelligent approach."

He emphasized that, even given additional men, the industry might not be able immediately to step up paper output, since normally a year elapses between the cutting of pulpwood and the making of newsprint.

The committee met earlier with representatives of the War Production Board.

After discussions with the WPB group which was headed by Harry M. Bitner director of the WPB printing and publishing division, Boren announced:

"The committee unanimously recommended that on the question of allocation the WPB should hold unalterably to percentagewise cuts rather than adopting any form of allocation."

The committee approved exemption of users of less than 100 tons of newsprint annually from any curtailment.

Criticism Of Argentine Policy In The Post Assailed By Espil

By the Associated Press

Argentine Ambassador Felipe A. Espil yesterday denounced press criticisms of Argentina, particularly an editorial in The Washington Post which called his country's policy "devious, disingenuous and double-faced."

Espil said the "abusive and threatening language" of the editorial was not the best way to solve hemispheric problems.

"The formal maintenance of diplomatic relations with Axis nations is a natural consequence of Argentina's continued adherence to a policy of neutrality," he replied to The Post's charges that his country was playing "the Axis game."

Argentina's continued neutrality, Espil declared in a statement, was not a breach of the Rio de Janeiro recommendations that republics of the Western Hemisphere break relations with the Axis. He said these recommendations did not constitute a pledge and that it was "unfair to accuse Argentina of having broken a solemn pledge."

"It is likewise too unfair to ignore the measures of continental collaboration that Argentina has taken, especially in the last two months," the statement continued.

The Post's editorial, based on the announced return of Ambassador Norman Armour from Buenos Aires, said: "Our patience with the policy so long pursued by Argentina has dwindled to the vanishing point. We are, as a matter of fact, close to a parting of the ways."

The editorial noted a recent statement by President Ramirez that he had no intention of establishing anything but a democratic regime in Argentina.

It observed that "more faith" would be placed in the words of President Ramirez "if they were not belied by the policies which the Ramirez regime has actually pursued. . . . The recall of Mr. Armour is a pointed reminder that we do not plan to be fooled very much longer by the devious, disingenuous and double-faced policy of a government which while professing hemispheric solidarity alone among the nations of the New World continues to play the Axis game."

Later in the day Espil saw Undersecretary Welles and said he had discussed the editorial criticism in a friendly way. He emphasized, however, that he had not lodged a protest.

Argentine Puts Heat on Labor

By Herbert M. Clark

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Buenos Aires, Aug. 11 (Delayed).—Argentina's campaign to eradicate Communist influences took an anti-labor trend today, which, in some quarters was interpreted as contrary to the constitutional democratic liberties which Gen. Pedro Pablo Ramirez has promised, when Minister of the Interior Col. Alberto Gilbert sent a message to all provincial authorities warning that the Communists were infiltering everywhere, especially "in all labor unions." He instructed them to close all Communist propaganda centers.

At the same time it became known that the authorities at Rosario, which is Argentina's second city, jumped the gun yesterday by closing 16 labor union headquarters before the instructions were received.

The ministerial note also called for the "immediate detention" of all Communist leaders "and henchmen" and the investigation of their connections "however remote with persons not of the same ideology."

This later order was regarded in some quarters as constituting a threat to personal security and liberty, which General Ramirez on Sunday termed "something too lovely to lose."

The measure was hailed by the "Nationalist" press, which is having a field day placing its own interpretations on all official declarations and frequently ignoring the letter of many of the official directives.

CHAPTER XI

Moscow Dateline

By Henry C. Cassidy

Correspondents Given Real Show

At the start I intended to write more about Russians and battles than correspondent and cocktail parties, but in this case all four become so inextricably mixed that it would be impossible to escape the latter. The activities of the correspondents on this occasion, moreover, deserve a place in anyone's history of the war, for it was an historic occasion, the first formal visit ever paid to the Red army by any foreign correspondents, and it was a precedent, establishing the rules for the future trips which gave the world its eyewitness accounts of the war on the Eastern Front.

We met in front of the Narkomindiel at 8 a. m., September 15, in a bewildering assortment of costumes. We were met by a staff colonel, a brigade commissar and a censor. We climbed into five wiry little M-1 automobiles and were off, down the Mojhaisk chaussee.

HENRY C. CASSIDY

We drove that morning to Viazma, a typical behind-the-lines town, bustling with the military life added to its peacetime activities. Situated in a pleasant valley, Viazma, celebrated for its making of gingerbread, was at that time a base for the Red air force, as it was to become later for the Luftwaffe.

We could see examples of the marksmanship, or lack of it, in German bombings out there, where they were meeting the full opposition of the Red air force. A towering warehouse and a conspicuous bridge had been the objectives of four raids, an officer told us, but they still stood intact. The fields around them were pitted with craters, the nearest more than a hundred yards away from the targets.

Planes "in Leaf"

At nightfall, we bumped across the fields to an expanse of land, which seemed to be just another empty space, studded like any other with clusters of shrubs, but which turned out to be an airdrome. Just being covered with branches and hardly to be distinguished in the darkness, was a squadron of 10 planes which had just bombed the Smolensk airport. The officer in command, Maj. Gen. Georgy Zakharov, a burly young man in fleece-lined flying suit and blue-banded cap, showed us around his field.

The planes were long, low-winged, water-cooled fighter-bombers, carrying four rack for bombs of 25 to 50 kilograms under each wing, with a cannon and several machine guns. One of them, already nestling under pine boughs, had a gaping hole directly through a red star in its right wing, evidently the result of enemy aircraft fire.

The pilots, still bundled in their flying suits, came out to tell us about their raid. Like any group of boys meeting visitors, they talked all at the same time, then all bashfully became silent and had to be prompted, one by one, to tell their stories. Ten of them had gone over . . . they went in at 1000 feet . . . they met no opposition until after they dropped their bombs . . . they saw 12 or 15 fires on the enemy airport . . . a building which they had been told served as quarters for Nazi officers was wrecked . . . they all returned safely.

Startling Demonstration

By then complete darkness had fallen and in the gloom we were given an unusual demonstration. One plane was trundled out of its hiding place, taxied into a clump of trees and faced across the field. An order was shouted and it fired four times. Its shells screamed past us and burst, making what seemed to me to be a later double blast and leaving two sparkling flares. We were so startled by the exhibition that everyone had a different version of it.

"The Germans are afraid of that," General Zakharov commented laconically. We wanted to know more about it, what it was and how it worked. He would only say that it was a new weapon, used both against planes and tanks and aimed so that it exploded on both sides of its objective. Later, I was told that was the "little Katiusha." If it was, that was the nearest I ever came to solving her mystery.

We drove away under a velvety black sky, studded with stars, to the International Hotel, Viazma. We were soon to regret that beautiful clear sky and even that bombing of Smolensk. But that evening we had other business, for Maj. Gen. Vassily Sokolovsky, then 43 years old and chief of staff of the Western Front, was waiting to talk to us at the hotel.

General Sokolovsky was the type of soldier of whom little was heard, but who was highly important behind the scenes. He served as chief of staff first to Marshal Timoshenko, and then to General Zhukov, working constantly, tirelessly, efficiently, at the sides of the great leaders, learning thoroughly the problems of the front on which he acted as a sort of permanent executive and discharging completely a tremendous amount of routine. Tall, dark, square-jawed, clean-shaven, dark hair parted on the left, he looked like the kind of man who, in America or England, would be a rising captain of industry or a progressive young president of a bank. Here, he was a leading officer in the service of the state, like many we were to see, carrying out responsible tasks with energy and efficiency.

Situation Outlined

Sitting around the dining-room table, on which cups of tea and platters of sandwiches had been stacked, we heard General Sokolovsky outline quietly and simply the situation on his front.

"The blitzkrieg, in essence, has been converted to blitz destruction of German men and material," he said. "The blitzkrieg failed in the sense that something has developed now like a continuous grinding of men and material, closely resembling the battle of Verdun, only 10 or 100 times greater than that, because the means of destruction in our hands are so much greater."

He advanced four reasons for the failure of the blitzkrieg and stabilization of the Western Front: the will of the Russians to fight, increased production of arms, the weak rear of the Germans, and the loss by many Nazis of faith in the invincibility of their own army.

"On a large part of the front, the Germans are already digging in," he said. "For hundreds, almost thousands of kilometers, they are now on the defensive. What lies ahead of them is trench warfare, mud, Russian roads, and winter."

One More Spurt

The Germans did have one more offensive spurt left on that front, which they were to start two weeks later against Moscow, but which was doomed to failure. After that, for more than a year to come, they were to stay, dug in their holes on that front, as Sokolovsky predicted. The accuracy of his estimate of the situation, at the time he spoke, we were permitted to see on the very front lines.

About midnight that night, after talking awhile longer, the general packed up his notes and nodded to his aide. They pressed their way through the admiring throng of waiters and maids who had gathered in the doorway and went back to their headquarters. We stood in line to wash under the single faucet at the end of the second floor of the International Hotel, and climbed into iron cots, three in a room. We were awakened at 7:30 a. m. the next morning by the next act in the aerial drama that began the night before with the bombing of the Smolensk airport.

The Viazma air-raid sirens whined, the antiaircraft guns set up their roar, there came the drone of planes, and then, suddenly, the shriek of falling bombs. One fell directly across the street from the hotel, blasting in our windows. A shower of glass sprayed across my bed. In a single movement I went out of that bed, back across the room, and under another bed by the door. Two other correspondents were already there. We waited, breathless, for the next bomb in that string. It never came. Instead, there came the song of fighters, rising to meet the enemy. The drone of planes faded into the distance. We could breathe again.

Neat Framing Job

"Come see this," someone shouted. "Anurov has been framed."

We ran down the hall to the censor's room, and found him lying ruefully in bed, a wooden window frame lying across his ankles and chest. Once he was disengaged, we discovered that the frame and glass had done him no more damage than a few bruises.

"Look at this," someone else shouted. "The house across the street has been hit."

We looked out to see a few forlorn folks digging into the wreckage of a thatched cottage, bringing out a body. Margaret Bourke-White bustled out to photograph those poor people in their moment of mourning. The rest of us tottered shakily to breakfast. There, we were told, nine planes had come, apparently in reprisal for the Smolensk bombing, and killed at least four and wounded nine persons.

The Gallup Poll . . .

By George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 12.—The Government's campaign against over-optimism regarding the war should more properly be directed toward leaders in Washington rather than the people of the country.

Despite the rapid success of Allied arms in Sicily the American people are actually taking no more optimistic a view about the length of the war than they did before Mussolini fell and Italy began to crack up.

Before the invasion of Sicily, the average guess of the American people was that the war in Europe would not be over until the middle of 1944. Today, even in view of the rapid improvement of the military situation, the average guess remains the same—that Europe will not see peace until sometime next summer.

While it is reported that some civilian officials in Washington see the possibility of Germany capitulating by Christmas of this year only 8 per cent of the American people are that optimistic. Three times as many think it will take until 1945 at least to smash Germany.

Those are the highlights from a Nation-wide survey started by the Institute slightly more than a week after Mussolini toppled from power.

As for the war against Japan there has likewise been no increase in optimism in recent weeks, even though naval experts point out that an Italian capitulation will release large Allied naval forces for use against Japan in the Pacific.

The public still thinks the Pacific war will last well into the second half of 1945, which was also their estimate before the good news from Sicily.

No one, not even the most astute and well informed military official, can do more than guess when it comes to the subject to the war's end. The importance of this guessing game is that millions of American families may be planning their lives in relation to their estimates of the probable length of the war. Also, it is believed in Washington that absenteeism in war plants may be traceable in part to optimism over the military situation.

The survey was conducted on the following question:

"How much longer do you think the war with Germany will last?"

The same question was asked with reference to Japan.

Liberty Is Promised

President Broadcasts To Philippines

By D. Harold Oliver

Associated Press Staff Writer

President Roosevelt last night promised the Filipino people full independence from the United States "the moment the power of our Japanese enemies is destroyed" and said that such freedom would come quickly.

In a recorded radio address broadcast to the Philippines on the occasion of the 45th anniversary of American occupation of the islands, the President said flatly:

"I give the Filipino people my word that the Republic of the Philippines will be established the moment the power of our Japanese enemies is destroyed. The Congress of the United States has acted to set up the independence of the Philippines. The time will come quickly when that goes into full effect.

"You will soon be redeemed from the Japanese yoke and you will be assisted in the full repair of the ravages caused by the war."

The Chief Executive's remarks were interpreted in Philippine circles here as countering Japanese Premier Tojo's reported pledge to the Japanese-seized island that they will be made an independent nation by the end of this year.

Joaquin M. Elizalde, Philippine resident commissioner in Washington, gave this meaning to the address. He also said it meant that the islands would not have to wait until July 4, 1946 for full freedom, as provided by the Tydings-McDuffie independence act, that independence would be "automatic when the Japs are driven out."

This would require amendatory legislation by the American Congress, but Elizalde saw no difficulty there. Present law provides for full freedom after a transition period to prepare the island economically to become a republic.

Elizalde said Tojo's independence promise was being followed up by a commission in the Philippines working on a new constitution for the islands, but that it was "hard to tell" whether the Filipinos on this commission were cooperating voluntarily with the Japanese or at the point of guns.

"Obviously," he said, "the President's message to the Philippine people is to counteract Japanese propaganda."

The President told the islanders that Japan already is tasting defeat in the Southwest Pacific and added:

"But that is only the beginning." He said the "great day of your liberation will come, as surely as there is a God in heaven." He praised the Filipinos for their bravery at Bataan and Corregidor and said by that resisting the Japanese invaders they gave final proof that "here was a nation fit to be respected as the equal to any on earth, not in size or wealth, but in the stout heart and national dignity which are the true measures of a people."

That is why, he added, that the United States "in practice regards your lawful government as having the same status as the governments of other independent nations. That is why I have looked upon President Quezon and Vice President Osmena not only as old friends, but also as trusted collaborators in our united task of destroying our common enemies in the East as well as in the West."

Pointing out that the Philippine government is a signatory to the United Nations declaration with 31 other nations, that it is represented on the Pacific War Council and in the United Nations' Food Conference, the President then said:

"'And, of course, the Philippine government will have its rightful place in the conferences which will follow the defeat of Japan."

Steel Commodity Ban Stiffened In New WPB Order to Industry

By the Associated Press

This is war, Bud, and if you're thinking about buying any cake cutters, merry-go-rounds, or hitching posts made out of iron or steel, you better take a good look at the War Production Board's conservation order M-126, as amended.

In revising M-26 this week, WPB wrote down a long list of things ranging from asparagus tongs to wine coolers which it said mustn't be made out of ferrous metals any more. That goes for stainless steel, too.

The list covers 17 columns of fine type and takes in such diverse objects as beer mugs, bird cages and calliopes. Nevertheless it presents some challenging anomalies.

For instance, it bans the use of steel or iron for making "cups, drinking, of all kinds, except for livestock." After this neighborly concession toward man's furred and feathered friends, WPB turned right around and laid a prohibitory finger on pet beds, pet cages, pet dishes, and pet houses.

The magic lantern trust took a body blow—it's products are barred. Strange and little known wares such as barn pushers and grass whips are out, so are crochet hooks, spittoons, picnic jugs, foot scrapers, dinner bells, door knockers, silos, roller coasters and mailing tubes and cases (except for transportation of bacteria, cultures, serums, plasma and biological specimens).

Bronzed cow punchers are going to have to break the news to Old Paint that he can't expect any gaudy new trappings for the rodeo. WPB slammed the door on making any more equipment for the bulldogging, goat-roping performances, ances.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Detroit, Aug. 12.—Fred Mandell is a young man who bought himself a job for $200,000. The job he acquired was the presidency of the Detroit Lions football team. Obviously he wasn't in need of a job with that kind of dough in his pocket but he thought it would be nice to own a football team.

POVICH

That was four years ago, but the fun hasn't started yet for young Mr. Mandell. His Lions were the lambs of the league last year. Didn't win a game all season, thereby setting some kind of a record. Mandell has been fishing into his pocket every year to finance the team. The only profit he has acquired is his experience.

There was some astonishment, anyway, when it was announced after the 1939 season that the Detroit franchise had been sold to Mandell for $200,000. Not so many years before, Jimmy Conzellman had bought the right to operate the Lions for a mere $250. Even in the year when the Lions had won the league championship, they had not proved a profitable venture for William Richards.

When Mandell acquired the Lions his new assets weren't very tangible. He discovered he had bought one leaky tarpaulin to cover the field, one Neon sign, 20-odd unsigned football players and no lease to play in any park. What he had, chiefly, was a firm faith in his ability to make it go.

Mandell now thinks he has made a start in the right direction after floundering around for three seasons. From the University of Detroit he wangled Gus Dorais, Knute Rockne's old quarterback, as coach. He's pleased about that. "'At least we'll have a big league coach," says Mandell. "Dorais' teams are always smart teams."

Mandell laughs when he talks of the new season's prospects. "We should have an improved team," he says. "There's no place for us to go except up, after last season. If we win one game, we're improved. I didn't mind taking the rap last year. I was sorry for the players. They played hard all the way.

"That reminds me of Augie Lio, whom they picked to play in the All-Star game against the Redskins in Philadelphia after the season closed. Lio played the first and third quarters of the All-Star game and was on the bench in the last period when the All-Stars were holding a slight lead. When the Redskins threatened to tie it up in the last five minutes, Lio got up off the bench and shook his fist at the All-Star line, yelling, 'Come on you guys, don't blow this one. It's the first time all season I've been on the winning team after 55 minutes of play!"

There'll be 50 players in the Lion's training camp despite the supposed scarcity of talent. Mandell says he could take 80 men to camp if he desired. There are enough married men and Army rejectees with minor ailments to equip all the clubs. He was not one of the panicky club owners who saw the doom of pro football in war time.

"This could be pro football's greatest year, and if we don't capitalize on it, it will be our own fault," he says. "With college football folding up as it has, the pros are in a wonderful spot. We have a chance to win over the college fans, who have been holding out against our kind of football. Given the chance to see the pros, they'll like them. Pro football has an opportunity now that it shouldn't muff."

Mandell opposed the merger of the Philadelphia and Pittsburgh teams and the suspension of the Cleveland Club from the league this year because he said he didn't like any such admission of weakness, but he was outvoted. "They were scared," he says, "and took the easy way out. Any club that puts a team on the field this year should make money."

What Mandell does vision is a 16-team pro league embracing franchises on the Pacific Coast and in the South. "The whole South is a hotbed of football and would root for a team in New Orleans, for example. Los Angeles and San Francisco are sure-fire football towns, too. Traveling will be no problem. All the trips will be made by plane after the war."

He thinks the pros will burgeon into a 20-game season for each club after the war. "That means two games a week, on Sundays and a week-night. Fifty-player squads would be necessary, but that would be all right. The way we are doing business, we plan all year for five or six nights a week, when we have home games scheduled. We have to do all our business in those five or six nights at home to get out of the red. That doesn't sound too sensible."

Indians Put Down Rally, Beat A's, 4-3

Tribe Now Tied With Tigers for 2d Place; Bagby Winning Pitcher

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug. 12.—Cleveland's Indians put down a ninth-inning rally to register a 4-to-3 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics today and move into a tie for second place with the Detroit Tigers.

Jim Bagby marked up his thirteenth triumph but Joe Heving had to be called to the mound in the final heat to subdue the Mackmen as Jo Jo White's double drove in two runs in the last frame.

The Redskins scored a run in the opening stanza and the A's tied it up in the fourth. The Indians broke the deadlock in the sixth on Buddy Rosar's single, a passed ball and a single by Manager Lou Boudreau. They added two more in the eighth on Rosar's single, a triple by Boudreau and Ray Mack's two bagger.

Boudreau had a perfect day at the plate with four hits, including two triples.

Phillies Edge Pirates, 4-3, For 7th in Row

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 12.—The Philadelphia Phillies won their seventh straight game tonight by turning back the Pittsburgh Pirates, 4 to 3, before 10,684 at Shibe Park.

A two-run rally in the seventh, featuring singles by Babe Dahlgren, Merrill May and pinch hitter Coacker Triplett, gave the Phillies their third straight decision over the Bucs and their twelfth triumph in 16 games under Manager Freddie Fitzsimmons.

After Pittsburgh had taken a 3-0 lead, Ron Northey put the Phillies back in the running in the fourth inning with his eighth homer of the season, scoring Jimmy Wasdell ahead of him.

Umpires Tom Dunn and Bill Stewart ejected four Pirates—Manager Frankie Frisch, Infielder Al Rubeling and Pitchers Bon Klinger and Hank Gornicki—for protesting Dunn's calling on a ball on Wasdell in the fourth.

Cardinals Miss Shutout by Run As Ott Homers; Chase Fans 10

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 12.—The St. Louis Cardinals, beaten yesterday in the series opener, put the New York Giants in their place today with a 4-to-1 victory over which Morton Cooper officiated with three-hit hurling.

One of these blows, however, was the 15th home run of the season for Manager Mel Ott in the fifth inning which saved the last-place Giants from the embarrassment of a shutout.

The only other salve for their feelings was the fact that Lefty Ken Chase struck out 10 men in the eight innings he pitched, but this feat was practically obliterated by the Redbirds' nine hits and the Giants' faulty fielding.

Harry Walker beat out two singles to stretch his hitting streak to 22 games and Stan Musial collected a triple, a double and a single.

The Cardinals scored in the first inning on a single by Lou Klein, a sacrifice, an infield out and a passed ball by Ernie Lombardi, Musial's three-bagger and Walker Cooper's fly brought a run in the third. A two-base error by Mickey Witek (whose two homers won yesterday's encounter) and Musial's double accounted for another run in the fifth and two singles, a fumble by Joe Medwick and another fly by Walker Cooper added the final tally in the eighth.

Modesty Stake To Burgoo Maid

Chicago, Aug. 12 (AP).—Burgoo Maid, 3-year-old filly owned by Ruth Sidell of Chicago, led all the way in the $5000 added money handicap at Washington Park today to beat Calumet Farm's odds-on Mar-Kell by a neck. W. G. McCarthy's Jerry Lee was a distant third.

Burgoo Maid, a $3000 claim earlier this year, drew out to a five-length lead in the stretch. Meanwhile Mar-Kell, burdened with 125 pounds and well out of it early, made up a world of ground in the last furlong. But the 4-year-old daughter of Blenheim II just failed to get up.

Bostonians Pound Out 10-6 Victory In Opener; Appling Gets Five Hits

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 12.—Manager Joe Cronin hit his season's fifth pinch home run today, but all it eventually meant for his Boston Red Sox was a 14-inning, 7 to 6 defeat by the Chicago White Sox after the Bostonians had pounded out a 10-to-6 victory in the opening game of a marathon double-header.

The Chicagoans won the nightcap when Shortstop Luke Appling, who fattened his league leading batting average to .336 with five hits during the day, tripled off Mace Brown to open the fourteenth and scored on Jim Webb's single.

Cronin's homer, with two on base, was hit in the seventh inning off Pitcher Lee Ross, who earlier had homered himself, and tied the score at 4-all. The Red Sox went ahead in the eighth, but Wally Moses hit a two-run homer off Dick Newsome with two out in the ninth to tie it up again. Joe Haynes, third White Sox pitcher who hurled the last five innings of the nightcap, allowed no hit and was credited with the victory.

Braves Beat Cubs on Triple By Neiman, 3-2

By International News Service

Boston, Aug. 12.—The Braves beat the Chicago Cubs in the twelfth inning today, 3 to 2, when Butch Neiman tripled to drive Tommy Holmes across the plate after two men were out.

Al Javery went the route for the Braves with a seven-hit performance to score his tenth win of the season.

The Cubs scored their two runs in the sixth when Cavaretta doubled and Nicholson tripled.

Dodgers Win As Higbe Hurls 5-Hitter, 3-0

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Aug. 12.—Brooklyn made it two in a row over Cincinnati in a twilight game today, beating the Reds, 3 to 0, on Kirby Higbe's five-hit pitching. All of the Dodgers' runs came in the first inning off Southpaw Johnny Vander Meer.

Higbe, in returning to winning form, struck out eight and captured his first shutout of the season. It was his seventh success against nine defeats.

Vander Meer, who never has beaten the Dodgers in their own park since his second no-hit game in 1938, was nailed for three runs in the opening frame on a pair of walks, an error by the usually accurate shortstop Eddie Miller and singles by Luis Olmo and Augie Galan. After this shaky start he settled down to match Higbe's masterful hurling, but it was too late.

The game was interrupted for 10 minutes by a practice air-raid alert.

W. P. Chrysler's Coronal Wins Belmont's Dorante Purse

15,000 See 3-Year-Old Take Feature

Navigating Runs 2d, Three Lengths Ahead of Mercy, With Atkinson Up

By the Associated Press

Belmont Park, N. Y., Aug. 12.—Coronal, a 3-year-old son of Sickle which had shown steady improvement in three previous outings this season, carried Walter P. Chrysler's silks to his initial 1943 score in the featured Dorante Purse before 15,347 spectators here this afternoon. The victor was the third successful favorite of the day, paying $4.30 for two. The chestnut colt was timed in 1:11 4-5 for his run of six furlongs over the main course.

Navigating, an entry with the ineffectual Shannon from the Wheatley Stable, sped to the place, three lengths in front of J. M. Roebling's Mercy, on which the popular Ted Atkinson was trying for his second click of the afternoon.

Coronal won three of his seven starts as a juvenile. This year, he ran in a Class C and then two Class B events before breaking the ice for his owner and himself today.

Dave Gorman sent the son of Sickle away a close third in the field of nine 3 year olds and rated him thusly for more than a quarter mile while Dartaway and Navigating were battling like a team for the lead. Gorman soon decided there was no point in dallying and let his mount open up a daylight advantage. It was virtually no contest thereafter, for Coronal proved far too fleet for his rivals and won in little more than a jog. Navigating drew away from the others in the final quarter mile, while Mercy moved up one notch to be an easy third.

Five-Gaited Horses, Hunters To Have Inning

Three-year-old hunters and five-gaited saddle horses, often overlooked in local competition, will have innings all to themselves Sunday at the North End Horse Show on the East-West Highway show grounds.

Chairman Gardner Hallman announced yesterday that he will put on a special class for 3-year-olds in an effort to give youngsters one of their rare opportunities this season for schooling purposes.

In addition, a long list of owners of five-gaited mounts beseeched Hallman to add a class devoted to their interests, so that Washington spectators will have their first glimpse of the "let 'em rack!" horses in several years.

Hallman added that he has put a class for working hunters who never have won championships in any show, thereby eliminating a topnotch handful of entries that ordinarily have little trouble in placing high in the ribbons.

"This class will give a lot of real, honest to goodness working hunters a chance," he declared. "Of course, we'll have the usual class for working hunters, open to all, but we figured that one restricted class would mean a great deal to local exhibitors."

Otto Furr of Middleburg, Va., will judge hunters and Fenton Fadeley and Hubbert Quinter, both of the District, will score open jumpers. Classes are for hunter hacks, open jumpers, warm-up jumpers, green hunters, open hunters with conformation counting 25 per cent, open working hunters, modified Olympia, working hunters that are nonchampionship winners, five-gaited saddle horses and two championships for hunters and jumpers. First class will be at 2 p. m.

Segura Enters Net Semifinals

By the Associated Press

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 12.—Francisco Segura, top seeded Ecuadorean blasted his way into the semifinal of the Eastern grass courts tennis championships at the Westchester Country Club today by outlasting stubborn James Brink of Seattle, 6—0, 7—5. Ensign Ted Schroeder, last-hour entrant into the tourney, defeated Princeton's Dick Bender, 6—3, 7—5, in his first appearance on the courts.

In the women's division, Pauline Betz, first seeded national player, crushed Barbara Schofield of San Francisco, 6—1, 6—1. Second seeded Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, Calif., eliminated Margaret Carey of San Diego, 6—1, 6—0.

Doris Hart of Miami, Fla., third in the women's seedings, defeated Barbara Nields of Rye, 6—1, 6—1. Fourth seeded Margaret Osborne of San Francisco eliminated Mrs. Joe Hunt of Annapolis, Md., 6—2, 6—0.

Boggs Entered In AAU Swim

More than 150 swimmers will compete in the District Amateur Athletic Union's championships at Takoma Pool at 8 p. m. Monday and Tuesday.

Ernie Boggs, the Shoreham Club's veteran backstroke swimmer, will be out to defend his laurels, and Jean Ort, the Shoreham's free-style champion, also will compete in the women's 100 and 200 yard free-style events. Rivalry will be renewed in the backstroke when Ensign Helen Perry of the WAVES and Shoreham Club, engages Leola Thomas, the Ambassador starlet who defeated her in a photo finish in the Weeks Memorial tournament.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

U. S. Employe Fathers' Draft Delay Likely

KLUTTZ

This is a piece of good advice to pre-Pearl Harbor dads in Federal jobs: calm down, you won't be drafted YET. Unless Selective Service changes its mind—and there's no guarantee it won't—fathers in Government jobs will be deferred for a considerable time after the induction of pre-Pearl Harbor dads gets under way on October 1 as scheduled. How long is "considerable" I wouldn't say, but I'm assured that it'll be considerable, perhaps for a few months and maybe for good. Local draft boards will be notified this weekend to take the pressure off Government dads.

Here's why: War Manpower is compiling a list of essential jobs from which dads aren't to be drafted until the supply of fathers in all nonessential occupations is exhausted. High on the list of "essential" industries are Federal, State, and county governments. Some 34 other war industries also are on the "essential" list which is being greatly enlarged. But the nonessential list is being expanded, too, and all the dads in nonessential jobs must be called before the draft boards get down to the essential list. Government—Federal, State, county and city—was placed on the first "essential" list compiled by War Manpower more than a year ago. Some months after the President abruptly canceled the deferments of all Federal workers and the Federal Government was taken from the list. Sometime later it was put back on the list.

The only possible hitch that could develop in Selective Service plans would be a decision to classify Federal jobs on their importance to the war. In other words, dads in War and Navy departments might be given a blanket deferment while fathers in some of the less essential agencies might be made eligible to immediate call. This plan has been considered and the budget bureau priority system for Federal agencies was suggested as a base. But it has been turned down. First, it would be an almost impossible job, and second, it's the policy of Selective Service to give blanket deferments to industries. For example, aircraft workers are given blanket deferments no matter if they actually make planes or work in the office. Incidentally, the essential industry plan which will control the drafting of fathers will in no way interfere with the work of the committee set up to control deferments in Government. The key lists will still be in effect.

ATTENTION, LOBBYISTS: The War Department, it's reported on good authority, is considering seriously moving the procurement division of the quartermaster general corps to Louisville, Ky. Several hundred employes would be involved in the move and the Lord only knows how many lobbyists, manufacturers agents and commission brokers, to use some polite names. You see, the procurement division does the buying for the Army . . . Former Representative William Nelson, Missouri Democrat, has been appointed assistant to Food Czar Marvin Jones. He'll be in charge of State war boards . . . Elliott Marple will continue as chief of the OPA press branch . . . Civil Service will hold a competitive exam to select OPA price specialists . . . Herbert N. Wheeler who has given some 4000 lectures and hundreds of radio talks on forest conservation, will retire from the Federal service on October 1. He was the service's chief lecturer.

Latest lay-off figures from the War Department are encouraging, from the employe viewpoint. It's true, as reported here many times, that the department staff here will be cut nearly 4000, but the number of employes actually to be laid off—and they'll get notices either Saturday or Monday—will be 1300. The difference is made up by people resigning and going into the military service. Moreover, several hundred employes are on leave, without pay, for one reason or another and the great majority of those will be cut off. Most of the people to be discharged are clerks and other lower-grade personnel.

Few, if any, stenographers and typists will be released. And if any are, they should make a beeline to the Civil Service Commission. They'll find jobs awaiting them. In fact, commission officials believe they'll have no trouble whatsoever in placing all of the 1300 who have passed a full-grade Civil Service examination. But, frankly, that's the catch. Many haven't, and that means they'll have to pass a regular examination before they'll be eligible for placement in jobs elsewhere. But examinations are given frequently, and employes in the War Department or in any other agency who haven't passed Civil Service examinations should take them at once for their own protection.

These agencies are hiring now: Treasury, Army Air Forces, Navy, General Accounting Office, Veterans' Administration and State Department. Many other offices are hiring to fill vacancies. And another thing, don't believe the recurring rumors that Navy Department will lay off hundreds of its civilians. It isn't in the cards. Navy isn't up to its personnel ceiling and it has many vacancies. At one time officials believed that enough WAVES would be recruited to fill these places. But the girls haven't joined the WAVES in numbers anticipated and consequently both WAVES and civilians are needed here.

Fugitive Is Held In $5000 Bond

Frank S. Fowler, 50, who, the FBI says, escaped on July 6 from a Georgia prison camp where he was serving a sentence for swindling, pleaded not guilty when arraigned yesterday before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage on a charge of impersonating an investigator for the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Bond was set at $5000 pending action of the grand jury.

Fowler was arrested in a hotel here on July 22 on a tip from a Senator who had been approached by Fowler, the FBI said, for a letter of introduction to enable him to open up a bank account.

2 Virginia Auto Drivers Fined $5 For Ignoring Last Raid Test

Charged with violation of OCD regulations in Tuesday's air raid test, two Virginia automobile drivers were fined $5 each yesterday in Municipal Court. They were Robrt W. Tate, 23, of Falls Church, and Amos Warner, 38, of Arlington. Police testified the drivers failed to come to a stop during the raid test.

New Tin Can Plan

The new plan of collecting prepared tin cans from apartment houses, adopted by a joint meeting of the District Salvage Committee and the Bottling Industry Committee after approval by the District Commissioners, will go into effect August 26, it was announced yesterday.

Apartment house residents are asked to place their prepared cans in suitable containers in front of their apartment entrance the last Thursday of every month before a a. m. Collection will be done by the bottling industry while the City Refuse Department will continue to collect tin cans from private dwellings on regular garbage collection dates.

Wherever possible, resident managers are urged to arrange for containers and advise their tenants of their location.

Appointment Announced

The appointment of Daniel C. Long as chief of Civilian Defense Service was announced yesterday by Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District director of civilian defense.

Long succeeds George Strong who recently resigned the post after his commissioning in the U.S. Army Engineer Corps. The Long appointment resulted from the recommendation of Chief Stephen T. Porter of the Fire Department, who has charge of auxilliary firemen and the rescue squad.

Blood Donors Like New Center And Quota Is Nearly Reached

By Anne Hagner

Post Staff Writer

"To be perfectly truthful, I'd rather be at this new Blood Donor Center for an hour, giving my pint of blood, than sit at my desk surrounded by memos and jangling telephones," a busy executive confessed to his neighbor yesterday in the refreshment room of the center, now located in air-conditioned splendor in the Acacia Life Insurance Building, 51 Louisiana ave. nw.

And such are the sentiments of hundreds of donors, accustomed to the heat and crowded quarters of the old Naval Hospital at 23d and C sts. nw., where the Red Cross center made its home until July 31.

The world at large has remained rather difficult to convince that the blood donor base has moved, Red Cross workers declared yesterday. Many times each day, Marine Corps guards at the hospital must explain to bewildered wanderers that the Red Cross doesn't live there any more.

Whole Third Floor

Occasionally even those who realize that 51 Louisiana ave. is the new address are nonplussed to find that they have arrived at an impressive granite structure that resembles an art museum more than an office building. Intimidated by the eagle-headed lions (or lion-bodied eagles) that grace the front entrance, would-be donors have been known to stroll about the neighborhood for minutes before being set straight on the matter by friendly policemen.

On the spacious third floor of the building, the Red Cross has taken complete charge. The change from the hospital to Acacia was so smooth, Chairman Loretta Bickford will tell you, that only 50 pints under the 3000 weekly quota were collected the preceding week—a normal letdown during 90-degree weather, she points out.

Particularly gratifying both to Mrs. Bickford and to Mrs. Margaret Werner, chairman of the Red Cross mobile units, is the fact that donations in outlying communities have climb steadily ever since the mobile service was instituted 11 months ago.

Truck's Achievement

When one lone truck began making its rounds at that time, the committee was pleased when it was able to report a total of 820 successful bleedings during a single month. During the first week of this month, 1578 donors gave their pints, comfortably over the mobile unit quota of 1200 weekly.

Biggest month thus far for the trucks was from April 30 to May 30, when 5608 contributions were made. The following month, when collections for the entire center were 13,407, highest in local history, the mobile outfits reported 5356.

Trips to outlying communities must be planned carefully, Mrs. Werner emphasized, because the trucks must remain within easy shipping distance of Kimberton, Pa., location of the Reichel Laboratory where blood from Washington and several important centers must be processed within 24 hours of being received.

Currently, regular journeys are scheduled as far afield as Lovingston, in Nelson County, Va.; Staunton, Tappahannock, Hopewell and Petersburg, also in Virginia, and Martinsburg, Charles Town and Shepherdstown in West Virginia. Biggest stay for a single unit was at Richmond, Va. recently, when 1029 successful bleedings were made in six days.

Local appointments may be made by calling District 3300.

Heat Reaches 91, Humidity Takes Drop

Southern Breezes Allay Discomfort; Today Warm, With Early Showers

Old Man Humidity, that fellow who delights in wilting collars, had a change of heart yesterday and took a generous hand in the weather situation as a lone unconscious woman, being carted off to a hospital as a prostration victim, came to and made such a fuss they turned her loose.

The woman, Mary Jones, Negro, 37, 1834 Vermont ave. nw., had been sitting on a bench in Franklin Park at 14th and K sts. At 4 p. m. she toppled onto the grass, unconscious. Police were called, and thinking her a possible prostration case, bundled her into the "wagon" and started for Gallinger Hospital.

But after a few bumps and the scream of the siren she came to, took one look about and made such a fuss the police looked at each other and their decision was unanimous; they turned her loose.

It was when the temperature rose from 68 at 6:10 a. m. to 90 at 2:30 that Mr. Humidity decided to slap back and in so doing brought relief in his own way. He dropped from a nasty humidity of 86 at 8:30 a. m. to the more refreshing percentage of 37 at 2:30 p. m.

And this pleased Miss Southern Breezes to such an extent "she" came into town with a gust from the hills to the southwest. As a result, there was only one heat "victim," although the temperature hit 91 at 4:30 and continued through 5 p. m.

Mr. Humidity will have a chance to be generous again today, for the temperature is slated to be "continued warm with a few light showers," ending in morning according to the Weather Bureau.

Last year on this day it was 86 high and 72 low. One year ago tomorrow it was 90—73 and a year ago Sunday it was 90—74.

Fire Hydrants Tapped to Aid D. C. Gardens

Skid pumps and Anacostia River water were put to work yesterday to save drought-hit victory gardens along Burnham Barrier, following the Commissioners' ruling allowing use of the OCD equipment.

Two auxiliary firemen and five volunteers began watering at 12:30 noon and continued through the afternoon.

Others areas were yesterday acting on the Commissioners' permission to use 1,200,000 gallons of city water for the 56 acres of community gardens by attaching adaptors and garden hoses to fire hydrants.

Watering in Takoma began early yesterday morning and lasted all day. Workers were hindered by location of plots 400 feet from hydrants. Pressure through the garden hose over so long a distance was low.

It was said that if a fire hose could be used for 100 feet before placing adaptors, pressure would be appreciably increased, but the District Fire Department is unable to release any lengths of hose. The Fire Department reported that should hoses be needed in an emergency, collecting, emptying, and rewinding of the hoses might result in a dangerous delay.

In American University Park six garden acres were watered all day with one garden hose because additional adaptors were not available. Watering was also reported at Crestwood yesterday.

Individual Soldier Main War Asset, Editor Tells Club

That this is not a machine war but a war of the individual soldier, Frank Dennis, assistant managing editor of The Washington Post told the members of the Kiwanis Club at the Mayflower Hotel, yesterday.

Dennis, who recently returned from a 7000-mile air trip to Army camps, stressed the importance of the soldier's training in modern warfare. As an example he noted that every tank soldier is an expert mechanic.

Dennis declared the present-day enlisted man is better trained and has a wider technical knowledge than the average officer of World War I.

100 Children Give Operetta Today

One hundred children from various recreation centers in Montgomery County will participate in the operetta "Johnny Appleseed" at 10 a. m. today at the Woodside Elementary School in Silver Spring, Md.

Centers participating in the show will be those at Four Corners, Takoma Park, Montgomery-Blair and Woodside schools.

Model Village in Griffith Park To Be Blown to Bits Tonight

blown 5 feet into the air and suffered shrapnel wounds during a demonstration Wednesday, was the chief "mine layer."

He was placing gas, magnesium, oil and incendiary bombs throughout the bleachers and the model village. Enough dynamite to disintegrate the flimsy structures and "provide some real noise," will also be used, he said.

The demonstration will start at 7 p. m. with a concert by the Metropolitan Police Band under the direction of Lieut. Charles Benter. At 8 p. m. a parade of the 1600 participants will move around the field, led by Police Chief Edward J. Kelly and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District OCD director, nad his staff.

Radio, stage and screen performers are scheduled to entertain. The new Army Air Corps band, contingents of WACS, WAVES and SPARS will march.

The whole show is free and seats are first come, first served.

Waitress Held By Coroner in Fatal Shooting

Miss Catherine Hamel, 28, a waitress, 1340 New York ave. nw., was ordered held for grand jury action yesterday following a coroner's inquest into the fatal shooting of Walder F. Brown, 38, former Union Station gateman, in their apartment.

Principal witness was Lieut. Col. D. W. Adams, retired Army officer, who told of hearing a shot while working in his laboratory, a floor below the one-room apartment shared by Miss Hamel and Brown.

Hearing the shot and a womn's scream, Adams testified, he grabbed a heavy iron door check and ran to stairs leading to the upper floor. On the stairs, he said, he heard a second shot and Miss Hamel came into view brandishing the old weapon. Adams said he disarmed the woman and called police.

Miss Hamel made no attempt to escape, Police Officer Howard F. Mowry testified. He said told him that she had purposely missed with the first shot, hoping to frighten Brown. The second shot, she said, according to Policeman Mowry, was intended for his legs but struck him in the chest. Police said Brown came here from Winston-Salem, N. C., and that Miss Hamel, divorced, had lived in New York, retaining her maiden name.

Miss Hamel did not take the stand, but previously she told Detective Sergt. E. E. Scott at the scene that Brown had abused her violently during the quarrel preceding the shooting. She is held in District Jail.

$13,500 Sought By Tenants Under Rent Control Law

Judge George P. Barse of Municipal Court is scheduled to hear today a $13,500 suit filed by 27 Negro tenants of houses in the 1900 block of Rosedale st. ne., who are suing under a little-known section of the Emergency Rent Control Act.

According to the suit filed by Dorsey Offutt in behalf of the tenants, a rent control hearing examiner held that C. Elwood Sager, 3828 Cathedral ave. nw., the landlord should make certain improvements including fixing of screens, adequate janitor service, and an office for payment of rent.

The suit says these improvements were not made, and the tenants state that these improvements to each of them are valued at $250. The suit claims that under the law, since the improvements were not made, tenants are entitled to double the value of the improvements.

United to Run Direct Air Line Into Capital

Direct United Air Lines service into the Capital will start Monday with a celebration at National Airport, highlighted by the christening of a UAL "Mainliner" by Mrs. Jimmy Doolittle, wife of the bombardier of Tokyo.

Flown in by Capt. E. Hamilton Lee, reputed to be dean of the world's pilots with more than 3½ million miles to his credit, the plane will be named "City of Washington, D. C." Captain Lee, by the way, is the pilot who flew out of Washington in the Nation's original air mail service between here and New York 25 years ago.

Starting at 2:30 p. m., the celebration will also be attended by several Government officials, it was announced, including Postmaster General Frank M. Walker, Charles I. Stanton, head of the CAA; L. Welch Pogue, chairman of the CAB, and William A. M. Burden, special assistant to the Secretary of Commerce in charge of air.

C. C. Thompson, vice president of UAL, will also be present at the ceremony, which will mark the beginning of a daily schedule of two trips linking Washington with Toledo, Chicago and the West Coast over United's network.

Together with American Airlines, the newly installed routes of UAL and TWA will now provide three transcontinental air lines for the Nation's Capital.

Driver of Truck That Killed Boy Cleared by Jury

Exonerating the driver of a Treasury Department Procurement Division truck of blame in the death of 12-year-old James W. Ellenburg of 1205 N st. nw., a coroner's jury yesterday returned a verdict of accidental death.

The boy was killed instantly Wednesday when, apparently losing control of his bicycle, he was crushed under wheels of the truck driven by DeWitt Nelson, Negro, 50, on 12th st. near K nw.

Young Ellenburg was a student at Thomson School and is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Furman D. Ellenburg, five brothers and four sisters.

Locher Renamed to Board

The District Commissioners yesterday announced the reappointment of John Locher to another three-year term as a member of the Unemployment Compensation Board beginning August 30. He is president of the Central Labor Council and secretary of the Washington Building Trades Council.

500 Additional Autoists Halted As Use Stamp Drive Continues

Deputy collectors of Internal Revenue, aided by District police, in the second day of their drive against drivers not displaying automobile use stamps, stopped approximately 500 motorists at intersections of 11th and N sts. se. and New Jersey ave. and N st. se., yesterday.

Spot sales of stamps were made to nearly half of those ordered to the curbings. The remainder were allowed to proceed after signing affidavits their stamps had been misplaced, lost or stolen.

The action, to be continued indefinitely in various parts of the city, was started by A. Parks Rasin, acting collector of internal revenue in Baltimore.

One conscientious motorist, according to Traffic Sergt. B. R. Campbell, waved a use stamp receipt at a deputy after being stopped. Told he must display the stamp the motorist drove off, telling the deputy he had lost the stamp. An hour later he was back, stamp in place, to announce he had found the missing stamp in a bureau drawer at home.

On the first day of the drive, Wednesday, 275 drivers were stopped at intersections of 6th st. and Massachusetts ave., and in the Waterside Drive section of the city and 175 bought their stamps.

7 Additional Food Dealers Penalized

Health Department Continues Drive Against Dirt in D. C. Establishments

As the drive to clean up the city's food establishments continued, two food dealers forfeited $25 each yesterday in Municipal Court and five others were fined by Judge John P. McMahon.

Charles Sanford, 62-64 H st. ne., forfeited $25 when he failed to appear to answer charges of having dirty cooking utensils, stoves, work tables, counters, slicing machine, cases, shelves, floors, walls, windows, dishwashing equipment and toilet rooms, as well as flies and insects on food and equipment and a lack of proper garbage cans or refuge containers. Sanford was one of eight restaurant owners the Health Department said yesterday were to be test cases before the Board of Revocation of Licenses.

Grocer Forfeits $25

Samuel Snider, grocer of 806 North Capital st., forfeited $25 when he failed to appear to answer charges of having dirty shelves, floors, counters, vegetable bin, toilet, and rat feces on premises, bad odors, lack of proper garbage cans.

Attachments which had been issued on Tuesday against two restaurant owners were dissolved by Judge McMahon when he learned that the restaurateurs actually were not due to appear until yesterday. He formally dissolved attachments against Harry Wasser, 811 Market Space nw., a baker, and against Pericles Karazikas, restaurant owner of 1128 18th st. nw.

Wasser's attorney, Harry Wender, proved that either a court attache or a policeman had made a mistake in declaring the restaurateurs were to appear on Tuesday.

"This is very serious, and something will be done about it," said Judge McMahon in dissolving the attachments.

Wasser was fined $15 on a charge of having no screens on windows. Other charges against him were dismissed.

Others Penalized

Karazikas was fined $25 on a charge of having improperly cleansed drinking utensils.

Christos E. Buas, 901 M st. nw., restaurant, was fined $10 on a charge of having improperly sterilized drinking utensils.

Stephen D. Lafas, bottling plant operator at 2109 10th st. nw., was fined $10 on charges of having a ceiling paint job half finished in bottling room, trash in drums and boxes, dirty floor, many flies, syrup room with dirty clothes about floor, and dirty stairs.

Lucille Capelan and J. Leoras, restaurant owners at 1031 17th st. nw., were jointly fined $15 on a charge of having a dirty slicing machine, exhaust fan, top of stove and hood of grill, an uncovered garbage can in the rear, flies and vermin on garbage.

City News In Brief

A flashing red light means stop! This reminder was given District motorists yesterday by William A. Van Duzer, traffic director, following court appearances of drivers who had passed flashing red lights and explained that they did not understand that the winking safety beacons meant to come to full stops.

"The flasher reds should be observed in the same manner as stop signs are obeyed" Van Duzer said. "Originally, lights at intersections where the winking red lights are now in use were turned off as gas conservation measure. It was found, however, that at some points traffic should be stopped to lessen accidents."

Child Care Parley Today

Miss Lillian de Lissa, British authority on child care in wartime and teacher training for wartime education, will be the principal speaker at a conference today on services for children of working mothers, arranged by the Office of Civilian Defense, the Federal Public Housing Authority and Federal Works Agency.

The conference will be held in the Departmental Auditorium. Miss de Lissa of London has been touring the United States under auspices of the British War Information Service. She will discuss England's child care program.

This Friday Stands Alone

Today is Friday the 13!

But the best part of this day, a day fraught with superstitions over the years, is that it's the only Friday the 13th in this year.

And now that we are at war and the English are our Allies, some new and reverse things have come to light. A black cat is considered good news in England, while here—it's neat!

Make a Lot of Goodness With a Little Bit of Meat And Reap Dividends

Stinting is not to be desired in meeting today's food problems. How to cook appetizing, nutritious dishes with the food available is the challenge cooks should meet.

Of course, no one can afford to waste food. Neither can anyone afford to eliminate certain foods because they are more costly than in normal times, or require points to obtain them.

Meat is one food I have observed which is not always receiving fair play. Some cooks do not include meat in their menu-planning often because their families look disdainfully on any cut of meat excepting a savory beef roast, a leg of lamb or a juicy steak.

Substitutes for meat such as cheese and beans are fine and definitely have their merits. But the food value of meat is not to be overlooked. Meal planners had to face a new responsibility with the decrease in meat supplies. Everyone recognizes how much the enjoyment of a meal centers around meat. So they should meet the problem by stretching the good flavor and nutrition of meat.

The Government has called attention to the fact that meat has been the source of over one-fourth of our proteins. Meat proteins are of high biological value. Meat, together with fish and poultry, has furnished nearly one-fourth of our iron. This food alone has supplied about two-fifths of the thiamin and more than one-half of the niacin needed. In addition, meat also provides riboflavin and the minerals—copper and phosphorus.

So with our domestic allotment cut short, it is every woman's task to learn how to prepare more cuts of meat, find

It doesn't have to be a thick sirloin steak or a leg of lamb to make the meal a success. Present the cuts of meat which are available in appealing ways. If you have a little of round steak you want to make go a long way, roll well-seasoned dressing in it and then cook it to tender perfection. Serve on an attractive platter with tender, well-cooked vegetables flanking the meat on either side. Watch the color scheme of the vegetables used.

appetizing ways to use the meats which are available, devise new ways to extend both flavor and nutrients, and above all present meat dishes attractively after cooking them with great care.

Delicately flavored veal is a favorite meat for summertime. This tempting meat can be prepared in a variety of ways, but there is always one thing to remember—to have veal at its juicy best, it must be properly cooked.

Haven't you sometimes tasted veal that was undercooked or dry? Remember that this mild-flavored meat has little fat, so the smaller cuts like chops, steaks and cubes should be cooked by braising. We mean cooking the meat with flour or bread crumbs, browning in a little fat, then cooking slowly in moist heat.

The large veal roasts, of course, have natural juices that will furnish enough moisture for the true roasting.

Veal combines easily with a number of other foods we like . . . fresh or cooked tomatoes or any green vegetable, or milder vegetables like creamed celery. For flavor sake, avoid combinations of veal and sweet starchy vegetables such as squash, sweet potatoes and turnips. And don't drown the mildness of veal by serving it with horseradish or mustard.

Here are some recipes for preparing veal in appetizing ways:

VEAL BRAISETTE

Season and flour two pounds of veal shoulder chops. Brown in a little lard. Add one cup water and six small peeled onions. Cover closely and simmer slowly for one hour. Add six small pared carrots and six medium pared potatoes. Cook for a half-hour or until the vegetables are tender. Arrange on a hot platter and serve very hot.

VEAL AND NOODLES

Season one pound of boneless veal breast and cut into cubes. Add one sliced onion and simmer in water to cover for 1½ hours. Dice veal. Add water to make one quart of broth. Add one diced green pepper and four ounces of noodles. Cook 10 to 15 minutes. Blend. Add two tablespoons of butter or margarine and season to taste. Serve very hot with a tart fruit or vegetable salad.

Here's a recipe with a bit of a Western tang. It is made with ground beef.

TAMALE PIE

Add one cup of corn meal slowly to boiling salted water. Cook for 30 minutes. Add one cup of chopped ripe olives. Pour half of this mixture into a well-greased casserole. Brown one pound of ground beef in hot fat, stirring to brown evenly. Add ½ cup of chopped green pepper and ½ cup of chopped onions and cook until soft. Then add two cups of canned or stewed tomatoes, one teaspoon of chili powder, and ½ cup raisins (optional). Simmer about 10 minutes. Add cooked meat mixture to casserole. Top all with remaining corn meal mush. Bake in a moderate oven (350° F.) about 45 minutes. Serve hot.

If you are able to buy hamburger, don't serve it in just the ordinary cakes. Vary its presentation and keep appetites stimulated. Here is a recipe for preparing three-fourths pound of hamburger. Cooked in this manner this amount will serve six persons.

HAMBURGER PINWHEELS

Saute ½ cup finely chopped onion in 2 tablespoons fat in covered saucepan for 5 minutes. Measure 2 tablespoons (reserving remainder for dough mixture). Combine the 2 tablespoons sauted onion, 1 teaspoon salt, dash of pepper, ½ cup fine soft bread crumbs, and ½ cup milk and ¾ pound ground beef. Mix thoroughly.

Next make the dough. Sift 2 cups sifted cake flour once, measure and add 1 teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons baking powder and sift again. Cut in 6 tablespoons shortening. Add remaining onions and mix lightly. Add ½ cup milk gradually, stirring until soft dough is formed. Turn out immediately on lightly floured board and knead 15 seconds. Roll into 12 by 9 inch rectangle. Spread with meat mixture and roll lengthwise as for jelly roll, wetting edge to seal. Cut into 12 slices, place cut side upon greased baking sheet. Bake in hot oven, 450 degrees, for 20 minutes or until done. Serve hot with green pea sauce. Serves 6.

When a boneless smoked pork butt is cooked by the following recipe it makes a grand meat dish to be served either hot or cold.

BONELESS SMOKED PORK BUTT

Scrub 1 pork butt (from 2½ to 3 pounds). Place in a kettle and add 1 tablespoon molasses, 1 thin onion slice, 4 celery leaves and 4 whole cloves. Cover by 2 inches with cold water. Add lid and bring slowly to boil. Simmer until meat is tender—about 2 hours. Remove meat from stock, strain stock and it can be used as the base for vegetable soup. Serve meat hot or cold.

Easy-to-Serve Foods Extend Hospitality

Every hostess likes to be kitchen free and smiling when guests arrive. But she can't be that way if she has to stay in the kitchen up to the last minute preparing a dessert. But if a fruit dessert is made in the morning and put into the refrigerator it will leave her free at the last moment.

Make a delicious dessert by the following recipe and serve crisp sweet wafers with it.

FRUIT SHERBET

Beat ½ cup water with 4 tablespoons sugar until sugar dissolves. Soak gelatin in 2 tablespoons cold water for 5 minutes; dissolve in sugar sirup. Add 2 cups of any fruit sirup and 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Pour into freezing tray and freeze until outer edge is firm. Beat 2 egg whites stiff and add 2 tablespoons sugar. Whip sherbet with fork and fold in beaten egg whites. Whip again a half hour before serving. Serves 8.

Discriminating hostesses will also have a cool drink recipe up their sleeves which they can concoct in record time when friends drop in. A minted tea punch is one that is most appealing. The recipe for making it follows:

MINTED TEA PUNCH

Pour 2 cups boiling water over 1 level tablespoon tea and steep for 5 minutes, then strain. Add 8 mint leaves and the thin yellow peel of one orange to the hot strained tea and allow them to stand until the tea has cooled. Strain. Add 1 cup orange juice, 3 tablespoons lemon juice and ¼ cup sugar or honey and stir thoroughly. Serves 4, 8-ounce glasses.

Coffee frappe is also a cool beverage which hits the spot for many persons. Now that we have an adequate supply of coffee, unrationed, this is a good drink to serve. Make by this recipe

COFFEE FRAPPE

Make 1½ cups coffee, double strength. Add 2 cups finely cracked ice, 1 cup vanilla ice cream, 2 tablespoons sugar, a dash of cloves and nutmeg. Shake vigorously until ice is almost dissolved. Serve immediately. Makes 4 8-ounce servings.

Cantaloupe nectar is also a drink which pleases many. Pick a ripe cantaloupe and then dice enough of the meat to make 1 pint. Proceed then as follows:

CANTALOUPE NECTAR

To 1 pint of orange juice add 2 tablespoons lemon juice, a dash of salt, 1 pint diced cantaloupe and 1 pint finely cracked ice. If you have an electric blender put all ingredients in container and blend for about 30 seconds, until thoroughly blended. If you do not use a blender then mash the cantaloupe thoroughly. Rub through sieve. Combine the ingredients given above in a jar with a tight sealing cover and shake vigorously until the ice is almost dissolved. Serve immediately. Serves 4 7-ounce glasses.

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The ears of all very new babies are so soft and fragile they bend easily in either direction, seemingly without discomfort to the baby. As the baby rolls his head around on the pillow he is very likely to turn these soft ears forward and sleep on them.

This habit is terribly distressing to the young mother who envisions ears like teacup handles on her precious baby. The mother should make it a practice to lay the baby's ears flat under his head when she puts him down in his crib, and straighten them when she turns him later. However, there never was a baby who didn't sleep on his crumpled ears at some time without devastating results.

Despite the parent's most meticulous care to keep ears turned backward many a mother discovers eventually her baby's ears do stick out. What is she to do then? Well, what would she do if she found baby had a long nose, or a wide nose or a turned-up or turned-down nose? Would she consider lopping it off or putting a clothes-pin on the end or turning it up or down? I doubt it.

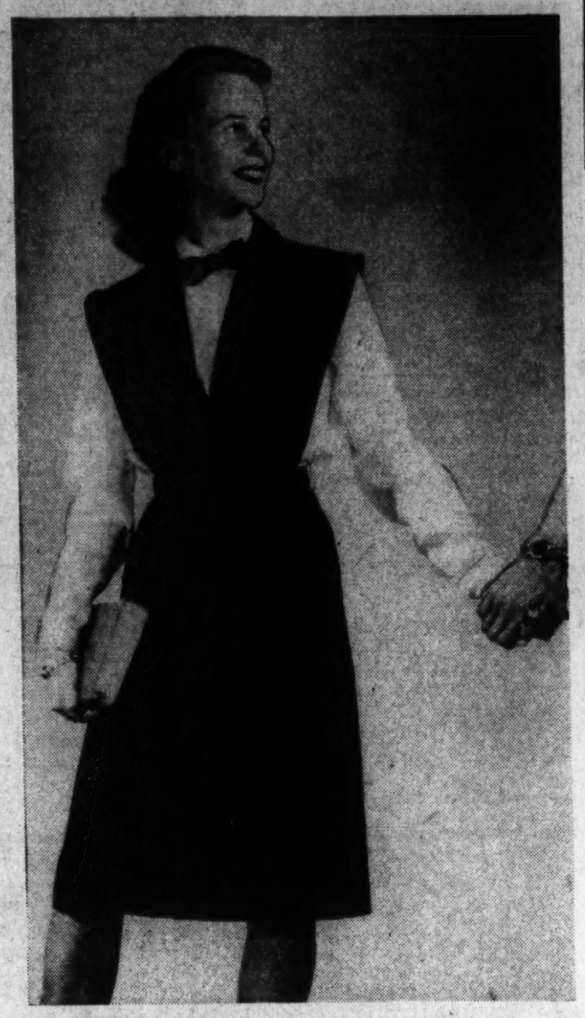
But she always thinks she must do something to change miraculously the hereditary shape of the ears. She considers adhesive tape. She puts on snug hoods. She thinks all she has to do is to keep the baby's ears flat to his head and he will have small, flat ears.

I wish I could agree with her. I think an ear can be pulled out of shape by ear-pulling, a habit as persistent as thumb-sucking. But, other than this, I firmly believe an ear has a shape and a set on the head that is inherited from father, mother or immediate ancestors.

The ear of such a child is not out of shape when it stands away from the head, it is due, primarily, to the size of the "cup" of the ear which holds the ear itself away from or close to the head. With large ears set on a deep cup the result is certain to be flaring ears.

One might bend the tip of the ear inward—and that isn't a pretty ear—by persistent binding, but it seems to me foolish to make a martyr of the baby in the futile hope of changing his ears to nice, flat ones. Let's accept a baby's ears as we accept the rest of his features, as expressive of this particular small human being—and love him anyway.

The Chesterfield Jumper



By Ruth Gregory

Here they are together. Two of the most-wanted styles for this fall—the jumper and the Chesterfield. And it's one of the happiest combinations we've seen this season.

This trimly tailored wool (wool and ryaon mixed) jumper with its velveteen collar and covered buttons will make a handsome, and versatile, addition to the schoolgirl's wardrobe. That's why Jill (our smart copygirl who's wearing it) picked it. She'll wear tailored shirtwaists with it (like the one photographed), or ruffly blouses when she feels like dressing up, or bright-colored sweaters.

Because it's tailored so, this is the type of jumper that will have a following among office girls who are concerned about matching up the way they look with what they turn out on a typewriter. There is a relation. We've never consulted a psychologist, but sloppy work days may very often be tied up with sloppy clothes. This is a vice versa jumper.

This comes in sizes 9 to 17 in black and navy and is about $11. The shirtwaist shown with it is around $6, and the bow tie is about 60c.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

At the end of a steaming day, your idea of relaxation may be to drop into an air-conditioned movie. It is a nice way to forget about the humidity. But if you've been sitting in an office all day, or standing on your feet, you need some active diversion. You couldn't do better than to swim a couple of times a week. Hike yourself over to the YWCA or some swimming pool and take a plunge. Of course if you can swim outdoors, that's better yet.

Swimming is the perfect summer exercise. It cools you off, uses the big muscles of the chest, shoulders, back and legs, and gets more air into your lungs than you would mountain climbing. The movements are rythmical, and there isn't any strain, but it affords more exercise in a given time than any other sport.

If you can't swim, it's time you learned. Anyone can learn. One of the best ways to get over being afraid of the water is to get the knack of floating. Lie on your back in shallow water, head tipped back and only the oval of your face and the tips of your toes out of water. It's getting your head well back so that you are in a straight line that gives you balance. You won't sink if you keep that straight line. After the third or fourth try at floating, start kicking your legs up and down, and bring alternate arms back in wide circles, pushing against the water as you bring the arms down and back—there you are, swimming the back stroke.

It doesn't matter what swim stroke you use. They are all good. The back stroke is excellent for straightening out rounded shoulders and pulling the midriff slim. The breast stroke is old-fashioned and slower, but it's a good chest builder-upper. The side stroke gives a good stretch. And of course there's the crawl, which is the fastest stroke and the one the experts seem to like best. The main thing about learning the crawl is to get your breathing right. Take a lesson or two from a teacher and you'll soon catch on.

There are a lot of false notions about swimming. One is that it's harmful to jump into cold water when you are hot. It's the nicest way to cool off

WACS Have a Word for It

By Ruth Cowan

London.—American Expeditionary Forces are going to have the whole world saying "Okay."

American soldiers in North Africa have the Arabs saying it. The American WACS in Britain are teaching it to their Allied sisters in khaki, the ATS.

The WACS and the ATS are having much fun—and some confusion—in learning each others' customs and language.

It seems in Britain that though a nice girl might swear, she won't call out "Hello" to a friend on the street.

"Nice British girls don't say 'Hello'," explained Barbara Wace, a British member of the Associated Press staff.

A British girl with a flair for slang would greet a friend on the street with "Oi, Bob"—a cockney expression, or "Hi, Bob," or just "Bob."

But to American WACS just plain "Hello" is a friendly greeting, and one of them, Lieut. Henriette Horak of San Francisco, the highly efficient WAC press relations officer, who nevertheless intends to have some humor in this war, said the WACS are educating the ATS in its correct use.

In return, WACS are picking up English expressions, mixing them up a bit, but having a good time of it. One of their favorites at the moment is "to take a dim view," which means they consider something "lousy"—an Americanism that is just too-too terrible for the British.

One typical British expression that a woman has to be careful about using is "bloody awful." A sophisticated modern British girl would use it—but not to her father, if he is of the old school. It sounds mild to the WACS.

The WACS have taken to "lift" for elevator; "perm" for permanent, and "a sweet" for dessert.

General Nutritional Deficiency Is One Cause of Gingivitis

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

GINGIVITIS is an inflammation of the gums and soft tissues surrounding the teeth. To anyone who has sore gums, they seem to be entirely due to local trouble.

Yet in nothing is it so true that a local disease may be due either to causes that are strictly local or due to some general body disturbance. The gingival tissue is a most sensitive indicator of the general condition of the body.

It is a fairly true statement that inflammation, redness, soreness and sponginess of the gums may be a forerunner of pyorrhea. But it is not 100 per cent true, and many teeth have been sacrificed to the idea that this form of prevention is the best cure, when a general survey of body conditions would lead to indications for treatment which would stop the process and hold off the pyorrhea indefinitely.

Of the general causes of gingivitis, a disturbance of general health, such as untreated diabetes, is a possibility. Allergy may cause herpetic eruptions of the gums, and soreness.

General nutritional deficiency is a potent cause, and careful attention to good eating habits a primary necessity. I agree with Dr. Yeretsky of Grand Rapids, Mich., that instead of saying just "eat more vitamins," the sufferer threatened with gingivitis should have a definite dietary program.

Daily, one-half pint orange, tomato or grapefruit juice.

Twice daily, one portion of one of the following vegetables: Spinach, cabbage, watercress, swiss chard, brussels sprouts, turnip greens, cauliflower, kale.

Once daily, one of the following vegetables: carrots, beets, peas, corn, string beans, onions, squash, cucumber, parsnips, turnips, rutabaga, artichokes, asparagus.

Bread, potatoes, noodles, macaroni, cereals, one at each meal, with fortified bread or whole-grain cereal at two of these meals.

Fifteen drops of cod-liver oil daily.

Any amount of fruit.

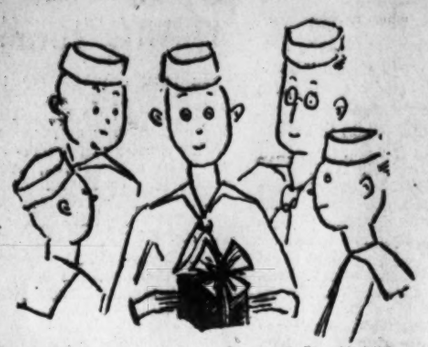
SHOP AND RUN



By Marianne

We say Merry Christmas to the Soldiers, Sailors, Coast Guard and Marines "Over There."

Strange to be Christmas shopping in August, but if you want him to receive your gift at Christmas, better start thinking about it now!

Here are the things we've uncovered as WANTED:

Soap

Soap will make him happy—especially the small thin cakes that are easy to handle and fit into a soap box. You can get six cakes of lanolated soap in a duffle bag for 59c, or you can buy pure castile soap and have his name, initials or his insignia stamped on it. And don't be afraid he'll think it's sissified—we're betting that he'll love it! 6 cakes for $2.50.

Money Belts

So here are the best ones we've found—one is made of a water repellant tackle twill, and has a zipper and three compartments; $1.50. The other is made of leather and has a soft fabric lining on the inside. It is moisture proof, soil resistant, and has a secret bill compartment and a safety "change" pocket. A tuck in pocket provides security for tickets, passes, etc.; $2.00.

Playing Cards

This is a gift he'll be sure to welcome. You can get 2 decks in a set for $1 and up. Something new in playing cards is a miniature deck that is easy to carry and costs just 40c a deck.

A Tobacco Pouch

Here's one we're sure he'll like. It's made of brown calfskin, lined with a waterproof lining and, best of all, folds so as to take up a minimum of space; $3.75.

A Handy Kit

Containing all the essentials in an unbelievably small pack. Comb, mirror, small box with soap, shaving cream, powder, razor, etc. In genuine leather with a water repellant lining for $5; in fabric for $2.50.

A Steel Mirror And Comb Case

This is a large unbreakable steel mirror that can stand up by itself or it can be hung up. The case comes in Army or Navy twill trimmed in leather. It also contains a nail file and a comb; $2.50.

Tropical Wrist-Watch Straps

These are high on the "wanted" list. Made of Irish linen (three for $1) and a sturdy twill ($1 each), the strap slips under the watch case so that perspiration won't seep in.

The Gentler Sex

'Decline' of the Home

The dread of another postwar jazz era is a general one. Perhaps such a calamity can be avoided. But whether or not it comes, of one thing we may be certain of—moralists of the late forties and early fifties will again be decrying the decline of the American home.

During the twenties, a frequent expression heard was, "The home has become a hotel." Worse charges may be leveled against it after the present war. Following every great social upheaval, the home and family life are reputedly going to the dogs.

Despite all the predictions about postwar gadgets, no one can foretell exactly how physical aspects of home life will be changed. But of one intangible development we may be sure—the freedom of spirit of the individual in the family group will be strengthened.

Those who confuse freedom with anarchy will no doubt object to this on the ground there is already too much freedom in the family, and that further "self-expression" of its members will head our civilization toward a Sodom and Gomorrah status. Even if such objections were valid, they could not stop the inevitable drift of social change. The family has been steadily evolving from a tribal dictatorship to a democracy and wars have usually speeded up the process.

Last War Gains Are Cited

For all the social running amuck that followed the last war the net result was to the good. Geoffrey Crowther, editor of the Economist of London, well expressed this in the New York Times Magazine when he wrote:

"For the ordinary man in one of the countries that fought right through the World War, was the world after the war a better or a worse world? It was a less secure, more worried, more irregular world—that we can admit. But in a greater variety of other ways it was a better world, richer both in income and in leisure, freer in the social conventions, deeper in the self-respect it accorded to the ordinary citizen, more democratic in the share of control over his own destiny that was allowed him?"

There are many persons, including virtually all political demagogues, who have a great nostalgia for the old-fashioned home life. They yearn for a "heavy father" to represent Jehovah in the flesh, to guarantee them protection against the storms of life. That feeling is partly responsible for the drawing power of the stage hit, "Life With Father." Yet how many of those who admire the roaring omnipotence of Clarence Day, sr., on the state would remain overnight in a home dominated by him?

It is true, of course, that the "heavy father" went out of home life nearly a half century ago. But he was succeeded by other smaller dictators, dominant mothers, clinging mothers, overanxious and slavish parents, and bullying children. The result has been to make the home a breeding place for neurotics—all through the failure of its members to recognize and respect the essential spirit of the individual, which is the basis of democracy.

More Running Amuck Is Inevitable

After this war we are bound to undergo some unpleasant and even frightening social dislocations. To cite a trivial thing which may have deeper significance, many fashion prophets predict a period of what they call "ultra-femininity" in dress as a reaction from wartime functional clothes. So we may expect a riot of furbelows, ruffles, sequins, junk jewelry, etc—and probably the mental state that accompanies such attire.

Also we may reasonably expect more social unconventionality. As Dr. James H. S. Bossard, sociologist at the University of Pennsylvania, says, "War cannot but affect the status of women." During war, he points out, woman must play at being man. When she works, earns and spends as a man, she wants the same rights, including the right to misbehave. Thus results a loosening of sex and family mores. Also with the sex ratio upset and the heightened emotional state of war still prevailing, woman's behavior for a time at least is likely to be erratic and even revolutionary.

However, this does not necessarily mean the decline of the family in the long pull. We lose a little, advance a little more—that is our pattern of social progress. The family is a hardy institution that has survived the higher education of women, woman suffrage, the entry of women into industry, and even wars and revolution. Its general march is always forward, toward a finer, more intelligent, more democratic relationship of its members.

Summer Planning Will Make Winter More Comfortable

Summer planning for winter needs takes on even greater importance in this year of war. Everywhere thoughtful homemakers are busy canning vegetables from their victory gardens to supplement next winter's ration.

Fuel rations, too, must be used most efficiently. And wise planners are taking steps now to insure economical use of coal and oil rations in order to maintain comfortable home temperatures this winter.

Having the heating equipment checked by an expert is the first step. A large percentage of furnaces ordinarily operate very inefficiently. Many lose as much as 500 to 1200 pounds of coal out of every ton and 30 to 60 gallons of oil out of every 100 gallons. Such waste cannot go on in this crisis.

Summer is the right time to make certain that fuel rations will not be wasted. For competent workmen may not be on hand to do the job when the rush season begins. Chimneys and flue passages should be cleaned and thermostats and stokers checked. A draft regulator is also a good investment.

Summer is the time to check home insulation, too. Surveys show that 70 per cent of American homes are poorly insulated. Many insulating jobs such as weather-stripping the windows and calking small openings between the outside walls and windows can be done by the family themselves.

The operation of one of the simplest and most efficient of insulators, cloth window shades, is, however, largely dependent on the thoughtfulness of American homemakers. Tests made by the Armour Research Foundation have proved that pulling the cloth window shades at night and whenever the family is away from home, can save the Nation as much as 9,000,000 tons of coal and 10,600,000 barrels of precious oil. When the shades are drawn, an insulating layer of air is trapped between the glass and the shade. This will save 40 per cent of the warmed air which ordinarily escapes through the window panes.

New Burn Treatment

The Office of Civilian Defense has withdrawn its former recommendation that tannic acid ointments or jellies be used in first aid treatments of burns. It now recommends sterile boric acid ointment or petrolatum.

It's About Time

By Dolores Boland

IT'S ABOUT TIME for a bride to plan a patch-work quilt which will be a history of the first ten years. Into this she will sew patches from trousseau garments, wedding gown, the groom's ties, draperies of first apartment, Junior's rompers, etc.

Cleaning Tips

Move chairs and other furniture set on carpet so that the spaces under the furniture legs can be cleansed. These places make fine lurking spots for moths. Also turn back the ends of the rugs and vacuum or clean often with a stiff brush, as moths like to hide in such dark places.

Bathing Suits

Be sure to dip your bathing suits into cool suds, rinse thoroughly in cool water and dry after each wearing. This will help keep them serviceable throughout the summer by removing particles of sand or grit.

Fluff Your Blankets

After you have laundered blankets and they are quite dry, rub lightly with a soft brush to raise the nap and help make them fluffy. To save handling you can do this right on the line before removing the blankets.

Flowered Fabrics Make Up for Scarcities in Other Furnishings

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

A few yards of flowered freshness will give the most jaded room a new lease on life. And to make your patterned chintz really count for most, use it repetitiously—the same design for draperies, slip covers, lamp shades. This idea is especially effective with a pattern of spectacular design or coloring. The idea works decoratively too with a simple blue-on-white voile or an all-green pattern on white. Try covering one wall, or an alcove, or an over-mantel with the same fabric you've used at the windows or on the furniture. Consider too the possibility of slip covering unexpected pieces of furniture—tables, unattractive chests, upright pianos, sewing machines. For that matter, what's the matter with a flowered cover for the typewriters that must preside in the best room? And unsightly books are amusing in slip covers to match the curtains. While big chintz-covered portfolios aren't hard to make and they are good places to keep the big photographs, clippings, programs and souvenirs that accumulate in the best of families. Use cretonne tablecloths to match your dining room curtains, with plain napkins the color of the walls.

Though a decorator's favorite recipe for most any room ailment is lavish yards of chintz, decorators are also clever about making a little length go a long way. And in certain rooms chintz is smarter as just a comment rather than a complete thesis. Plain voile curtains with a flowered valance or swag, organdy curtains with flowered chintz appliqued garlands, plain textural bedspreads with an underflounce of chintz, plain slip covers with round extra cushions of flowered chintz—such accents can be very smart and effective.

Cut-outs of chintz glued on drawer fronts, cabinet doors and such like add charming decorative detail for made-over furniture. Garlands of cut-out chintz are interesting pasted on the wall too to match a motif in bedspread or curtains—place them over the bed, around the dressing table mirror, on the doors.

Don't forget plaids in thinking about patterned effects for certain roms. They're charming for casual colonial rooms, sleek for modern. Even rather formal rooms can sometimes use plaids with aplomb—pastel plaids or even robust clan plaids for more courageous tastes. They too can be used abundantly or as accent.

Main think to remember in times like these is that flowered fabrics can compensate for a lot of lacks in heavy furniture which is scarcer than fabrics under war conditions. While manufacture of fabrics has been drastically curtailed, with certain fibers entirely out of civilian use, there is still a reasonable quantity of printed cottons coming through and in charming usable patterns.

Miss Louisa Catherine Clement To Marry Lieut. Comdr. Hull

New York Girl Engaged to The Rev. L. Burns Saltzgiver

Capt. and Mrs. Donald Cameron Bingham announce the engagement of Mrs. Bingham's daughter, Louisa Catherine Adams Clement, to Lieut. Comdr. Harry Hull, USN.

Miss Clement is the daughter of the late Clarence Erskine Clement of Newburyport, Mass. She was graduated from Holton-Arms School in 1939 and last June received her degree from Bryn Mawr College. She is a direct descendant of John Quincy Adams and is a member of the National Society of Colonial Dames of the District of Columbia.

Lieut. Comdr. Hull is the son of Mrs. Charles T. Phillips and the late Harry Hull of Athens, Ga., and was graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1932. He has just returned from commanding a submarine in the Southwest Pacific. He is a member of the Chevy Chase Club.

The wedding will take place soon.

Welsh—Saltzgiver

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Marjorie Elizabeth Welsh to the Rev. L. Burns Saltzgiver, by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hirman L. Welsh of Cincinnati and New York.

The prospective bridegroom is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. Willard E. Salzgiver of York, Pa., and is Protestant chaplain of the National Training School for Boys in Washington. He was graduated from Gettysburg College and in 1940 from the Gettysburg Lutheran Theological Seminary.

Miss Welsh attended Packer Collegiate Institute and is in the junior class of the School of Nursing, Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center.

Lamsdorff—Wrangel

Count and Countess Nicolas Lamsdorff of New York announce the engagement of their daughter, Countess Catherine, to Baron Alexis Wrangel, son of Gen. Baron Peter Wrangel, former commander in chief of the White Russian army, and Baroness Olga Wrangel of Birmingham, Mich.

The bride-elect, a niece of Princess Alexis Obolensky, studied abroad. Her mother is the former Princess Troubetsky. Baron Wrangel attended Michigan and Columbia Universities.

Anna Ferry Is Bride of Lieut. Dolan

At a candlelight ceremony in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Henry Ferry, Miss Anna May Ferry yesterday became the bride of Lieut. Joseph Edward Dolan.

The bridegroom is the son of Dr. and Mrs. John Edward Dolan of Perry Point, Md. Officiating at the 8 o'clock service in the presence of members of the immediate families was the Rev. G. E. Lenske of Grace Lutheran Church.

An improvised altar was banked with palms, roses, asters and gladioli. Mr. Ferry gave the bride in marriage. She wore a gown of white lace over satin, made with sweetheart neckline, and her fingertip-length veil was held by a crown of lace and seed pearls. Her bouquet was of white roses and orchids.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held, and the couple left later for Camp Davis, N. C., where the bridegroom is stationed.

The bride is a gradaute of Mount Vernon Seminary and Chevy Chase Junior College. Lieutenant Dolan received his degree from the University of Illinois.

Gordon-Worth Rites to Be Held Tomorrow

The marriage of Miss Amonett Gordon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Boyle Gordon, to Lieut. Francis R. W. Worth, USN, will take place tomorrow afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon on Woodland drive.

Lieutenant Worth is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hal Venable Worth of Raleigh, N. C. He is a graduate of the United States Naval Academy and until recently was Assistant Naval Attache at the United States Embassy in Lima, Peru. At present he is on duty in San Francisco, Calif.

The bride-elect is a graduate of Holton-Arms and Smith College and made her debut here several seasons ago. They will make their home in San Francisco.

Harry Frosts Joined by Sons In Virginia

From Pearl Harbor and Louisiana come the Frost brothers to spend their service leaves with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Frost, at their home, Frostfields, near Middleburg, Va.

Lieut. Winston Frost, United States Naval Reserve, arrived on Saturday to spend several weeks at home. He has been in the Pacific for 16 months and flew from Pearl Harbor to California on the first lap of his homeward journey. Another plane brought him to Virginia last weekend. He will attend Graduates School at Quonsett Point, R. I., later in the summer.

Meanwhile his brother, Lieut. Henry W. Frost, U. S. A., is planning to arrive home before his Navy brother leaves. He is on duty at Camp Polk, La.

Major William B. Harding To Bring Bride to Capital

John M. Remsen of Takoma Park Marries Pennsylvania Girl

Maj. William Barclay Harding, United States Army Air Corps, and Mrs. Harding, now on a wedding trip to Cape Cod, will shortly come to Washington, where Major Harding is on duty.

The bride is the former Mrs. Mary Reed Dodge, daughter of Mrs. Henry Werlemann of Rumson, N. J., and Col. Latham Reed. The wedding took place in the chapel at Mitchel Field, Long Island, on Wednesday with the Rev. Paul Minton officiating and with only Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Knowlton attending.

Mrs. Harding was previously married to Marshall J. Dodge, jr., and the bridegroom's first wife from whom he was divorced in June was Miss Constance Fox. Major Harding attended Groton School and Yale University. His Washington residence is 2909 Dumbarton ave.

Remsen—Stever

Mr. and Mrs. John Montfort Remsen, the latter Miss Genevieve Louise Stever before her marriage on August 7, will go to Terre Haute, Ind., following a brief wedding trip, where they will make their home. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Stever of Windber, Pa. Mr. Remsen's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Peter Remsen of Takoma Park, Md.

The ceremony was held at the home of the bride with only members of the two families attending. A reception to which close friends were invited followed the wedding. White gladioli, ferns and lighted tapers were used in decoration. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white marquisette gown with a Juliet cap of silver lace. She carried a colonial bouquet of white roses.

Miss Margaret Stever, her sister's only attendant, was in blue marquisette and she carried a colonial bouquet of pink roses and sweet peas. R. Keith Warner of Takoma Park served as best man.

Graham—Jackson

Miss Audrey R. Jackson and Corpl. Cletus L. Graham, USMC, whose marriage took place Saturday, August 7, have returned from a short honeymoon and are now making their home in Washington. The bridegroom is stationed at Annapolis, Md.

The double ring ceremony was held at 2:30 in the rectory of St. Patrick's Church with the Rev. Theodore M. Hisburgh officiating. The bride wore a soft blue frock with a matching hat and white accessories and a corsage bouquet of gardenias. Mrs. Mariette Garganio was her matron of honor and only attendant and Frank McLaughlin, USMC, served as best man.

Admiral Spears To Entertain

Rear Admiral William O. Spears will be host at a reception tomorrow afternoon at the Mayflower in honor of a group of Peruvian pilots who are in this country making a tour of East Coast plants.

The aviators are in the United States at the invitation of the Navy Department and the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs.

Naval Air Officer Home on Leave

These are home-coming days for a number of the Capital's servicemen. Among them is Ensign James J. Glock of the Naval Air Corps, who arrived on Sunday from Corpus Christi, Tex.

Ensign Glock has just completed his pilot training in Texas and received his wings a short time ago. He will spend a week or more with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Glock, before leaving for a new base.

It's an Old Wedding Custom . . .

Harris & Ewing

. . . for the bride of a service officer to cut the wedding cake with her husband's sword, and as can be plainly seen Mrs. William Warburton McDonald (above) is doing just that. She is the former Miss Renee Stein, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stein of Lausanne, Switzerland, and her marriage to Lieut. Comdr. McDonald took place here on Saturday, at St. Margaret's Church.

Virginia Officer Awarded Air Medal in Pacific

Lieut. Archie D. Simpson, jr., USMC, of Round Hill, has been awarded the Air Medal following bombing missions against Japanese shipping and shore installations, despite heavy anti-aircraft fire and Jap fighter opposition.

He is the 23-year-old grandson of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Thomas of Round Hill, and the son of the late Archie D. Simpson and Mrs. Gladys Thomas Simpson of Round Hill. Lieutenant Simpson is a member of a Marine scout bombing squadron and has been in action in the Pacific, where he has become a battlewise and seasoned veteran. The citation follows:

"In the name of the President of the United States, the Commander, South Pacific Area and South Pacific forces, takes pleasure in awarding the Air Medal to First Lieut. Archie D. Simpson, USMC, for services as set forth; for meritorious achievement in aerial flight against the enemy while serving with a Marine scout bombing squadron in the Solomon Island area, from November 4 to December 27. During this period Simpson participated in 34 hazardous missions, five of which were attacks on enemy shipping. Most of these were successfully carried out, although opposed by heavy Japanese fighter planes and antiaircraft fire. His conduct was in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

Mrs. T. R. Cowell Visits Manhattan; Returning Soon

Mrs. T. Richard Cowell of Sunny Side, Upperville, Va. and Washington, is in New York for a visit. She will return to her Virginia home the last of August, where she will be joined by her son, Richard Cox Cowell, who is attending summer school at St. Mark's in Massachusetts.

Mrs. Cowell is on the committee to sell War Stamps and War Bonds for Loudoun County, Va. She gave a party for the "cause" Saturday evening in Middleburg. She brought a large truck from her farm down to the village, parked it at the side of the street and had a colored orchestra—Nat and his Gang—seated in the truck to play for the evening.

A group of girls went among the crowd as they gathered, all holding small pitchers, for Mollie Pitcher Day, filled with stamps. The total sale at the end of the performance was $300. One of the gatherers, Miss Carol Olive of Foxcroft, sold $50 worth of stamps, winning the prize for the highest sale record.

William J. Lee, Jr., Takes Bride

Of interest to Washington is the marriage yesterday of Miss Virginia Hopkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Johns Hopkins of Tavistock, Wynnewood, Pa., and Private First Class William Justice Lee, jr., son of Capt. W. J. Lee, USN, and Mrs. Lee of Bethesda, Md. The ceremony took place in Prout's Neck, Me.

Miss Clark To Be Wed At Md. Home

Postponed a week because of a last-minute change in Army orders, the wedding of Miss Dorothy Virginia Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Lyman Clark of Woodside, Md., to Lieut. William Richard Anderson, USA, will take place Sunday afternoon at Labyrinth, the family home where five generations of the bride-to-be's maternal family have lived.

A few days before the wedding scheduled for last Sunday, Lieutenant Anderson was ordered from Camp Claiborne, La., to Camp Ellis, Ill. Several changes in the bridal party had to be made but other details will be carried out according to the original plans.

Miss Clark will have Miss Mary Kate Howard of Silver Spring for her maid of honor, and Lydia Jane Clark, her 11-year-old sister, as junior bridesmaid. Lieut. Jack Reed, stationed at Fort Belvoir, Va., where the bridegroom-elect was commissioned, will be best man. Charles McNulty, U. S. Coast Guard, stationed in Atlantic City, N. J., cousin of the bride-to-be, will serve as usher.

The Rev. Walter Gale, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, will officiate at the 4 o'clock ceremony, followed by a reception for close friends and relatives.

Miss Clark, who attended the University of Virginia, has been on the faculty of the East Silver Spring Elementary School since her graduation last February from the Maryland State Teachers College at Towson, Md. Lieutenant Anderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Anderson of Hannibal, Mo., was graduated from Rolla School of Mines (Mo.) and is a member of Sigma Nu fraternity.

Job Expert Stresses Education Need

By Genevieve Reynolds

Don't chuck your educational opportunities. Stick to your studies when possible. Come the end of the war, jobs will get scarcer and the old cry of specialists and experts will be heard throughout Government and private industry. So predicts slim, handsome Miss Kathryn Nelson Fox, president of Zonta Club of Washington.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

"You can get jobs now with practically little or no training," she said, "but as the employment situation tightens in the postwar world only those fully trained and equipped can be sure of jobs. There will be more and more emphasis on specialists."

Miss Fox knows whereof she speaks. She has seen the employment field through several phases. Back in 1933, through the Civil Works Project preceding the WPA, she saw thousands of people looking for jobs. Now she worries because thousands of jobs are looking for people.

As chief of recruiting, U. S. Employment Service for the District of Columbia, she literally recruits in her sleep. Each day she is faced with new and insistent demands for typists, stenographers, telephone operators, automobile mechanics. Now she's in the midst of recruiting vacationeers to work for the Food Administration Camps in Virginia and Maryland. Fruits, especially apples and tomatoes, are badly in need of pickers.

After studying social economics at American University, Kathryn went to business school. Four times she tried to sell herself on the idea of being a secretary or stenographer. She disliked it so much that she turned to personnel work, which she loves. After working as personnel director for several private employment agencies, she took another course at the Agriculture Department's Graduate School.

"Can you pick the person for the right job by sight," she was asked.

"I like to think so," she replied. "But then you have to determine the applicant's fitness by her experience, education and personality. In public contact work appearance and personality count about 75 per cent."

Born in a small town near

MISS KATHRYN NELSON FOX

Charlottesville, Va., tomboyish Kay could ride any kind of horse. Once she rode a cow that threw her on a rock pile. At the circus one day a clown called for volunteers to ride a donkey. Well, the trick donkey threw Kay and thereafter she stuck to horses.

In her childhood days slim, long-legged Kay often played hookey from school. Skating held more allure than books. But with Zonta programs, planning war projects and recruiting six days a week, there's no time left to play hookey or ride horseback—her favorite sport.

In addition to riding and skating, Kay's chief hobbies are fishing and reading. Historical novels are her preference. Her excellent collection of records—both classical and popular—are enviable. An ardent sports fan, she's a Redskin enthusiast.

Asked about her plans for Zonta Club this year, she explained that several projects are pending, waiting sanction of the board of directors. If the board agrees, the members will collect furniture and furnishings for the Red Cross to furnish rooms for the antiaircraft workers. Aid to China Relief is another war project pending. Specifically, she hopes to concentrate and to channel the club's activities into needed war projects.

Whether or not women maintain the gains they have made in industry and profession during the war depends upon themselves. They must make their voices heard in the postwar world according to alert, friendly Miss Fox. She is convinced that all women should be thinking and planning for the reconstruction of the postwar world.

Soft spoken with prematurely white hair, youthful looking Miss Fox combines competency with a keen sense of humor. Don't try to fool her, she can see through all your shams.

Tennis Champions Will Play Sunday

FROM RAYON TO RUMBA sums the career of Harold Nagel, whose radio orchestra will be the star attraction at the fall opening of the Carlton Hotel's night club on Saturday, August 14. He was reared to manage his family's rayon mills in Austria and, now look!—he's wound up in God's country as a dance band leader. The list of Nagel engagements is imposing, includes a three-year stretch at the super-swank Hotel Pierre in New York, two years on the NBC networks.

Burt Lopatin, wartime absentee owner of Burt's Trans-Lux, has received a commission in the United States Coast Gu... It's Ensign Lopatin now.

FRESH NONRATIONED ENTERTAINMENT. Washington nitery owners have been making smart new buys in the diversion markets . . . Herb Sachs of Del Rio is proudly presenting Eddy Rogers, hero of innumerable topflight radio shows, and his band. Loraine Daly, former Herbie Kay star, is the Rogers singer . . . Raye and Naldi, dance perfectionists and current Manhattan pets, opened at the Troika last evening. They fit beautifully into the revue headed by the Duncan Sisters . . . El Patio has booked clever Nat Jaffe's Trio until August 23 when the tremendous Adrian Rollini will take over. Jaffe is a musician's musician. Connoisseurs of le jazz hot will really go for him . . . Up at the Victory Room Tommy Reynolds has been practically knocking the roof off since the first of the week. Our scouts tell us that you won't believe your ears when you hear the Reynolds' "Fuzzy-Wuzzy" number.

KAY ARDEN,
Neptune Room pianist. She's as dextrous as she is pretty

A CLEAN YARN. Maestro Davy Crocker came into the Dubonnet Room the other night and passed cigars to the boys—said his wife had just presented him with a little bundle of joy. But it wasn't a boy or a girl. His laundry had finally come back.

Most exciting event of the fall promises to be the appearance of the great (and we use the word advisedly) Hildegarde at the Statler. She'll be there for two weeks, probably late in September.

BACK FROM VACATION is Johnny Shaw of the Mayflower Lounge. He's brown and fit as a farmer, confides that he spent some time picking tomatoes. They looked so good that he ate 'em instead of canning 'em . . . Leonard John Mitchell, executive director at Olmsted's, is back from a week of sun tanning at Virginia Beach, all fulla pep and promises of culinary surprises.

JIVE IS HERE TO STAY says Maestro Paul Kain of Glen Echo. He maintains that the Charleston and Big Apple were merely the anemic forerunners of the hot rhythms of today. Say it isn't so, Paul!

The Club "400" entertainers, first booked as soloists, are now frequently merging their talents in close harmony. Owner Joe Moss has proudly christened them the "400 Bluebloods."

RETREATS FROM REALITY—AND HEAT. After a hard day, it's good for everyone to have an escapist hour or two . . . The Starlight Roof is an ideal spot to loaf and invite your soul. Myles Hallett's music has a frosty ripple and they serve the tallest rum collins in town . . . The Parrot's terrace garden is cool and fragrant. Hot corn sticks and home made (truly) ice cream are always on the menu . . . Quiet reigns in the twilit cocktail lounge of the Lafayette Hotel. There's never a sound but the coos of romantic twosomes and an occasional faint whisper of string music . . . Treasure Island is as escapist as the pirate yarn from which it takes its name. The walls are in dreamy tropical murals and Rocco Terrone's music is out-of-the-worldish.

TREATS IN EATS. Mayfair's thick and tender steaks are glorified by a savory sauce, the invention of Chef Olindo . . . The mustard and honey sauce at Ruby Foo's is supposed to be for egg rolls, but, confidentially, we put it on everything.

MOMENTS YOU'LL ENJOY. The toy soldiering of the Two Niles in Lotus' "Broadway Revue" . . . Marian Carl's lovely soprano yodeling of "Kiss In the Dark" at the Old New Orleans . . . "Wing and a Prayer" always seems new when done by Georgia and Jerry at the Anchor Room . . . Lew Folds' wild juggling of everything but the Mia-San Girls at the Casino Royal.

OCD Pageant Promises An Array of Talent

By Marjorie Kelly

Tonight's Civilian Defense Pageant at Griffith Stadium is shaping into quite an event. As you doubtless know, it is designed with the laudable intention of luring you to sign up for Civilian Defense. Twenty thousand more workers are needed, in addition to the 48,000 already engaged in Civilian Defense work in the District.

The bait? Well, it's pretty enticing. We told you yesterday that the veteran actor, Harry Langdon, who is currently engaged in kidding the pants off gas rationing on the stage at Loew's Capitol, would be present; also Ladd Lyon from the Earl's new stage show which began last night, and Tommy Reynolds' orchestra from the Roosevelt. The Earle's Frank La Falce had promised that he would let us know today the names of some more entertainers who would lend their talents to the worthy affair, and sure enough today comes a memo from the ever reliable Mr. La Falce, and it says that two more of the good people at the Capitol will be there—pretty former-child-star Edith Fellows, and former Fred Waring soloist, Patsy Garrett. It also says that Eddy Rogers, who now is at the Del Rio, will be there along with his orchestra, which includes his singing star, Lorraine Daly, his violinist, Vera Rogers, and Joe Lepore, comedian vocalist.

Furthermore, Mr. La Falce says that the entertainment committee is going to spring a surprise by offering several topnotch entertainers whose names have not yet been announced to appear. And if Mr. LaFalce says that, you can count on it.

Figure it out for yourself. It would cost you a pretty penny to view this array of talent at the various spots where they earn their bread and butter, but you can see them all free simply by turning up at Griffith Stadium and exposing yourself to the danger of signing up as a Civilian Defense worker. And seriously, it would be a fine thing to do. Civilian Defense work is of the drab, or Quietly Heroic type of war work; unless and until Washington is bombed it will not be exciting or colorful. But somebody has to do it, and if the city is bombed we'll all be darned grateful for the unostentatious people who make up the Civilian Defense organization.

Having been unable, due to space restrictions, to review "Of Mice and Men" which is currently being revived at the Little Theater, we'll give you a once-over-lightly on it.

This is one of the finest films of recent years, and, as you will not need to be told if you have ever seen it, one of the few films which bear seeing twice. John Steinbeck's moving story has been filmed with Burgess Meredith and Lon Chaney, jr., in the roles of the men whose life-long friendship is cemented by the fact that Lennie has the mind of a child and George must look after him. Betty Field plays the flirtations, persistent girl who gets Lennie into trouble in spite of his best intentions.

Musso Crowds Lana Out

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 12.—Gracie McDonald has finally been rewarded with a good part as the only woman in Walter Wanger's "Chung-ho"—all about marine raiders on Makin Island. She'll have Noah Beery, jr., making love to her, and Randy Scott and Alan Curtis hovering about. They're off to Camp Pendleton now. . . . Walter Reed, so good in "Bombardier," enters the Army August 17, then goes into Moss Hart's show about the air force . . . "Join the movies and see the world," says Emily Kimbrough, coauthor of "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay." She has a book coming out and she's been asked to do a lecture tour starting in New England come October. She went with a friend to a typical Hollywood cocktail party the day Mussolini bowed out of the war. She made a bet with the friend that Mussolini's name wouldn't be mentioned. She would have won it, too, except just as she was leaving a fluffy scatterbrain barged up to the hostess and said, "What a pity! That Lana Turner's baby was born the same day Mussolini stepped down! The dirty bum! He wiped Lana's name right off the front page!"

JOAN FONTAINE

No Time Wasted

"Cabin in the Sky" is so successful that Metro's having an original story written for Lena Horne and Rochester . . . It's a cinch that when Metro makes "Forever" Joan Fontaine will star in it. She's the ideal choice . . . The only war pictures Metro will make from now on are "Expendable" and "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo" and, of course, "Dragon Seed," with Hedy Lamarr . . . Anita Loos is off to New York to do a play for Arthur Hopkins . . . John Farrow tells me every time he puts a silly mustache on a guy for the Hitler gang, he looks like Charlie Chaplin giving an imitation of Hitler. Why not get Chaplin? . . . 'Tis said Oona O'Neill Chaplin will have her baby three months after Joan Barry expects hers.

That's Loyalty

Helen Forrest, Harry James' soloist, has turned down personal appearances at $3000 each to stick with James . . . If you hear a slight groan coming from Merle Oberon it's because she's doing a dance sequence in "The Lodger" and using muscles she hasn't used for many years.

Pix

"You Can't Take It With You," one of Frank Capra's biggest successes, is showing this week as the last of the Pix Theater' Capra Cavalcade. The film version of the Pulitzer Prize winning play has Lionel Barrymore impersonating Grandpa Vanderhof, James Stewart as Tony Kirby, Jean Arthur as Alice Sycamore, and an imposing list of reliable actors including Mischa Auer, Edward Arnold, Donald Meek, Ann Miller and Spring Byington in supporting roles.

The story is of conflict between one family which lives for the fun of it, and finds living a great deal of fun, and another "saner" family which believes in duty, making money, and three square meals a day with two vegetables, a salad, and a meat course at dinner every night.

It is a remarkably fine film and, though five years old, deals with nothing more dated than a discussion of the relative advantages of communism, fasciam and Americanism, with the decision going to Americanism.

Romantic Interest in Soldier Show

'This Is the Army' Received Warmly at Earle Premiere

Irving Berlin's "This Is the Army" opened last night at the Earle Theater, playing to a packed and enthusiastic house.

Long before curtain time, people began to line the curbs along 13th st. between F and E, listening to the Washington Military District Band playing outside the Earle and waiting for the celebrities to arrive. They saw celebrities, too—the guest list included, besides Irving Berlin, Jesse Jones, James F. Byrnes, Elmer Davis, Fred N. Vinson, William Jeffers, Leo T. Crowley, James Forrestal, Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Lesley J. McNair, Col. Oveta Culp Hobby, Admiral and Mrs. Emory S. Land, Stephen Early, Mrs. Jimmy Doolittle and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman.

A Heartwarming Show

"This Is the Army" is a splendidly heartwarming show, in celluloid as it was on the stage. The Warner Brothers have added a story, and scenes from Berlin's soldier show of the first war, "Yip, Yip, Yaphank," starting out the screen play in 1917, with the principals of the "This Is the Army" taking part.

The gap from the Armistice to the present war is bridged by the effective expedient of having the men who were in "Yip Yip Yaphank", at Camp Upton shown listening to their radios on the night Kate Smith introduces "God Bless America," and remembering the days of the old camp show and how they threw "God Bless America" out of that one in favor of a finale song with more punch. This is an impressive scene, and it is a command performance, literally, for when President Roosevelt saw the stage version of "This Is the Army" he said "There's only one thing wrong with it. Kate Smith ought to be in it to sing 'God Bless America.'"

The film then picks up Camp Upton once again, showing the sons of the old Camp Upton outfit now in service, and traces the production of the soldier show of this war.

In so magnificent a show as this one there are more admirably done scenes than could be described in twice this space, but there are some which must be mentioned.

There is the scene in which soldiers of the Air Corps singing dissolve into a Guadalcanal scene of breath-taking beauty. There is the farewell scene in the early part of the 1917 sequence, when Maxie Twardovsky says goodby to his mother, who thinks that to find peace was why they had come to America, and why did her son have to go to war? There is the scene with recruits in underwear, on which considerable research was done at induction centers before the film went before the cameras, so that we are assured that the underwear these fellows sport is more like the what inductees really wear than the red flannel of the stage show undies.

Notable Scenes

Then there are the many scenes in which toughie Alan Hale's hard-hearted sergeant figures. "I keep telling them, you don't get no soldiers in no draft," he says disgustedly of a set of recruits he gets in the 1917 sequences, and shortly thereafter the best gag in the show is pulled at his expense—"Guys like him aren't born—they're issued."

Last but certainly not least is Irving Berlin's rendition of "Oh, How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning." Singing in his high, soft voice, he delivers the words of his celebrated lament in front of a row of tents, an impressive background. He got a hand that testified to the audience's affection for this veteran showman whom they knew to be in the house with them.

Taken as a whole, it is a beautifully conceived and munificently done production, and one which no one will want to miss.

LEONARD LYONS

Bernard Shaw at 87

(Leonard Lyons is on vacation. His guest columnist today is the renowned biographer, Emil Ludwig.)

A man who outlives the Biblical age in health and vigor of mind owes this to wisdom and moderation. G. B. S. has both. They have preserved him—more than his vegetarian and anti-alcoholic diet, for neither rich food nor wine prevented Titian from becoming a hundred.

BERNARD SHAW

Like in most things Shaw surpasses his colleagues in his vitality. As far as I know, no poets since Sophocles have reached his age. Really, the humorists should live longer than the rest of us because they don't get angry, but just laugh at annoyances. For they all are far under G. B. S. Casanova and Mark Twain, 74; Aretino, 62; Rabelais, 59; Moliere, 49. Even Voltaire, Shaw's great immediate predecessor, cannot hold parity with him; he only got as far as 84.

Shaw is the most kind-hearted man in the world. People always believe that a satirist must be pungent, that he will sacrifice anybody to be able to make a biting comment. Shaw is so superior and in such inner harmony that he never would attack you with a lance; he takes a peacock's feather to tickle people in the neck.

Of course he is full of irony when he describes a character "What sort of man is that who invited me for tomorrow?" I asked him about an English political leader.

"Oh, he is not dangerous. I made a waiter out of him in my play, "You Never Can Tell."

Another time I begged him not to go to see a political play of mine that was being given in London, because I felt he would have done it so much better. But after I had left London he did go and wrote such a review on it as no other writer would have done for someone trying to compete in his special art.

Often we disputed about our peoples, the German and the English, and both of us, like all critical minds, were stricter with our own land than with that of the neighbor. Once I ended: "Well, perhaps the Germans are not quite as bad as I made them, and the English better than you say."

"Oh," he retorted, "with the Germans you may be right—but as to the English no—nothing doing, they are just as bad as I have made them."

Shaw, doubtless the greatest writer and educator of our time, is despised by the highbrows, smiled at by many universities, but most popular with the public. And he does not go in for slogans, he is always in conflict with some group or other. Only stupid, unimaginative people believe that such a man is always on the lookout for some paradox he might project.

If he never had possessed the great talent he has, he still would be an astonishing character. Of all men living he is the only man I know who is absolutely independent.

Dr. Littlehales, Hydrographic Engineer, Dies

Dr. George Washington Littlehales, 82, hydrographic engineer, died unexpectedly yesterday at his home, 2132 Leroy pl. nw.

Dr. Littlehales assisted the then Comdr. Richard E. Byrd for many years with navigation problems and one of his contributions was development of a computation table which allowed Commander Byrd to cross the South Pole without having to land to make accurate readings. The explorer was able to tell his position at any time. By comparing readings on an ordinary mariner's sextant with figures supplied by Dr. Littlehales.

He also has done research in hydrography, oceanography and terrestrial magnetism. He was author of numerous books on subjects in the same fields and has written several mathematics textbooks.

Born in Schuylkill County, Pa., October 14, 1860, he was graduated from the United States Naval Academy and received an engineering degree from Columbian University (now George Washington University).

He was a hydrographic engineer with the United States Hydrographic Office, 1900-32 and during that time was consulting engineer at Carnegie Institute and taught at George Washington University.

Dr. Littlehales was married to the late Helen Powers Littlehales. Surviving are two sons, James H. Littlehales, local patent attorney, and Lieut. George R. Littlehales, USN and a daughter, Mrs. Margaret Vondersmith of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 11 a. m. in Gawler's Chapel, 1750 Pennsylvania ave. nw. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

3 U. S. Science Authorities Get Soviet Honor

Three world-famous American scientists, one of them a Noble Prize winner, yesterday were made honorary members of the Academy of Sciences of the USSR, as a symbol of "the great fraternity of science all over the world."

Andrei A. Gromyko, Soviet Charge d'Affairs, presented the membership cards to Dr. Walter B. Cannon, physiologist at Harvard Medical School, and Dr. Ernest O. Lawrence, winner of the Noble Prize in physics for his trail-blazing research in atomic structure, who also accepted the card for Dr. Gilbert N. Lewis, professor of physical chemistry at the University of California, who was unable to be present.

Speaking to an invited group of scientists, gathered at a reception at the Soviet Embassy, Gromyko declared that "in these days, progressive scientists are threatened with the loss of what is dearest to them—liberty" and called for "collaboration of American and Soviet scientists."

"Science, in our day," he said, "is an integral part of the general military effort, and at the same time, is also an inalienable part of peaceful creative work."

Dr. Cannon and Dr. Lawrence recalled their experiences with distinguished Soviet scientists, in correspondence and at international scientific meetings, and expressed their hopes that this may be but one occasion of a growing international collaboration among scientists and finally among all men of good will.

Impending Dairy Products' Shortage Reported To Jones by Farmers in Northeastern Area

By the Associated Press

Marvin Jones, War Food Administrator, was warned by organized dairymen and poultrymen of Northeastern States yesterday that 43 million consumers in that region face short supplies of fluid milk, eggs and poultry during the next 12 months unless the Government takes steps to provide livestock feed.

Farmers in 13 New England and Middle Atlantic States who normally depend upon imports of corn and other feed products from the Middle West to supply dairy herds and poultry flocks are now unable to obtain supplies, the producers said, because Government price policies discourage their shipment to the East.

This report was laid before Jones by a committee of the Northeastern Dairy Conference and the Northeastern Poultry Producers Council headed by J. A. McConnell of Ithaca, N. Y., who also is chairman of the National Feed Industry Council, a governmental advisory group.

The dairy and poultry groups also appealed to four big national farm organizations for aid in getting the reported feed shortage corrected.

The Northeastern feed grain shortage for the coming year was estimated at 1,675,000 tons.

The committee told Jones if it were not for fairly good pastures at the present time, Eastern dairy production would now be declining snarply.

This appeal for Government action designed to start corn moving Eastward again came at a time when the Food Administration was studying proposals to allocate, and possibly ration, feeds among various classes of feeders, with cattle and poultry taking priority over hogs.

New Battle Against Food Subsidy Predicted

Predicting a return congressional bout with the Administration on food subsidies, Representative Jesse P. Wolcott of Michigan, ranking minority member of the House Banking Committee, yesterday leveled a charge of "subterfuge" at Government food planners.

"They have two or three plans for buying and selling food crops and supporting farm prices, and all of them add up to subsidies," said Wolcott. "In my opinion, congressional opposition to subsidies will be stronger than ever."

Wolcott Led Last Revolt

Wolcott, a leader of the last Capitol revolt on food subsidies, said the Administration choice apparently lies between an OPA plan to purchase food crops outright and resell them at a loss, and a WPA proposal to lift farm support prices above ceiling levels, "or a combination of the two."

"They have both the power and the money to launch either plan without action by Congress if their purpose solely is to increase production," said Wolcott, "but they have no authority to either support or buy and sell commodities for the purpose of regulating prices, and Congress will not give them the money or power to do it. To do that in the name of greater production would be sheer subterfuge.

Jones said WFA suggestions farm support prices be lifted to stimulate production is "thoroughly inconsistent" with the President's anti-inflation arguments against above-parity prices for farmers. He said farmers were planting all of the crops they could now, with available manpower, and incentive subsidies would lift production "only slightly, if at all."

Farmers Being "Courted"

Evidence meanwhile mounted that War Food Administrator Marvin Jones was courting farm bloc favor through moves to raise farm support levels and to meet complaints of "Big Four" farm leaders.

Latest move was appointment yesterday of former Representative William L. Nelson (Democrat) of Missouri, erstwhile colleague of Jones on the House Agriculture Committee, as a special WFA assistant. Nelson said his job would be to help rebuild the food program along lines which would give "the folks back home more to say about what's being done." Said Nelson: "Regulations issued from Washington will be held to the very minimum."

Suit Filed Against Kaplan

Suit was filed yesterday against "Monroe Kaplan, sometimes known as John F. Monroe" of 2101 R st. nw., asking District Court to give full faith and credit to a New York court judgment against him for $4509.16, which the suit alleges is owed a prominent inventor.

Plaintiff in the case is Russell Maguire, of Greenwich, Conn., who is described by his attorney, Nicholas Chase, as inventor and owner of interests in a machine gun manufacturing concern.

Chase said the money was owed by Kaplan in connection with the development of a Louisiana oil field.
